Unchanged Condition of the Situation in France.

Paris Forts Damaged and Government Shells Falling in the City.

More Victories Claimed by Both the Contesting Parties.

Harmony, Money and Men Sadly Required by the Commune.

The Government Still Unable to Pay the German Indemnity.

Comprehensive Resume of the Recent Operations.

THE SITUATION IN FRANCE.

Important Reasons from Prince Bismarck.

BERLIN, April 27.—The Kreuz-Zeitung of to-day announces that Prince BISMARCK has instructed Gen. FABRICE to represent to the Paris Commune that, in case of any mishap to the Archbishop of Paris, the Prussians might probably interfere in the affairs of the city, in favor of the Versailles Government.

REPORTS FROM PARIS.

Forts Damaged—Projectiles Falling in the City—A Victory Claimed by the Communists.

PARIS, April 27.—The southern forts are badly damaged. Versaillist projectiles fall inside the ramparts of the city. Many people have been killed and wounded. Mot d'Ordre says the Communists will blow up the forts if necessity occurred. The Commune claim to have silenced the Versailles battery at Meudon, captured a barricade at Neuilly, and dismounted five guns at Courbevoie. The Commune Council holds its sittings with closed doors.

Money and Men Wanted by the Commune—A Sad State of Affairs—Signs of Weakness.

LONDON, April 27.—The Evening Standard's Paris dispatch says that the Commune suffers for want of union among its members, as well as for lack of money and men. The National Guards openly disobey its orders. It is believed the last stand will be made in the Rue de Rivoli and Rue de Castiglione, in the immediate vicinity of the Place Vendome. Fort Montrouge will probably be stormed by the Versailles army today. The Commune has impressed into service the porters of the Lyons Railway. The sentence disbanding the One Hundred and Fifth Battalion of the National Guard for cowardice has been quashed. Fort Mont Valerien is silent today. It is now admitted that the Government is unable to pay to the Germans the first installment of indemnity long since due.

VERSAILLES REPORTS.

Important Movements North of Paris—More Fighting Reported—Unsuccessful Efforts of the Troops to Cross the Seine.

LONDON, April 27.—The News' dispatch from Versailles says a force of 5,000 troops from the Versailles army has executed some important movements north of Paris. The situation of the insurgents south of Paris is good. M. THIERS announces that active operations commenced yesterday. Forts Vanves and Issy were fired upon, and the latter will soon be silenced. The insurgent battery on the Trocadero has been removed. There was some fighting at Asnieres yesterday. The Versailles forces made an unsuccessful attempt to cross the bridge over the Seine to Clichy. The telegraph dispatch says the Prussians have ordered the arrest of the curate of the Church of St. Denis; cause unknown. Seven cannon in Fort Issy have been dismantled, and Fort Montrouge is an utter wreck. The Prussian Gen. BARNACKOW and staff have arrived at Dieppe, and Gen. VON GOBEN, commanding the Germans in the North of France, is expected.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The High Commission—English Parliamentary Proceedings.

LONDON, April 27.—In the House of Commons, this evening, Viscount ENFIELD, Under Foreign Secretary, in reply to a question concerning the action of the Joint High Commission, stated that no convention had yet been signed. At the same time he declined to specify what points the Commission had already adjusted.

In consequence of a circular addressed to the supporters of the Ministry, announcing that M. DISRAELI intended to oppose the Budget, there was a full attendance of members.

Mr. GLADSTONE announced that the propositions to impose a tax on matches, and to increase the duties on legacies and successions, would be withdrawn to reconcile the opposition to the remaining recommendations of the Budget, and that an addition of two pence on a pound to the income tax would be substituted.

Results of the Newmarket Races.

LONDON, April 27.—The race for the One Thousand Guineas Stakes for three-year-old fillies at Newmarket today, resulted as follows:

Baron Rothschild's b. f. Hannah, by King Tom, out of Mentmore Lass.....1
Lord Anglesey's bl. f. Steppe, by Saunterer, out of Confusion.....2
Mr. Mayer's b. f. Noblesse, by Stockwell, out of a Brown Duchess.....3

Seven horses ran.

THE PACIFIC SLOPE.

The Case of Mrs. Fair—The Seward Party—Pacific Steam-Ships.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—Mrs. FAIR, the murderess of Col. CRITTENDEN, will not be sentenced until the 26th of May, her counsel having reserved about forty exceptions to the ruling of the Court upon unimportant points. Up to yesterday morning the gamblers were ready to bet that two of the jurors would refuse to agree on a verdict of guilty.....Gen. BUCKINGHAM and party have arrived. Wm. H. SEWARD, Jr., and party are traveling in the southern part of the State, and are warmly received.....The rumor that the Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company has sold out its franchises in Mexico to the North Pacific Transportation Company, and will withdraw the Panama line, is again renewed. It is understood that the North Pacific Transportation Company will run a Panama line wholly for the European and coastwise trade.

The Press in California unanimously indorse the verdict in the Fair case, and congratulate San Francisco and the State on the vindication of law, justice, morality and decency in the result of the trial.

THE EAST.

A Suicide—Railroad Appropriations—Release of a Fugitive.

BOSTON, April 27.—The wife of Rev. THOMAS HILL, of South Dedham, drowned herself in a pond in that town yesterday, while temporarily deranged.....The Joint Legislative Committee on the Hoosac Tunnel and Troy and Greenfield Railroad has voted to appropriate $30,000 to build a railroad from the west portal of the tunnel to North Adams, to connect at the depot there with the Troy and Boston Railroad.....Small-pox in Lowell has been effectually checked by the sanitary measures adopted by the Board of Health.....O'BALDWIN, the pugilist, having served out his term in Lawrence, Mass., was released yesterday to his friends, who propose a benefit for him to-morrow at the Olympic, in this city.

A Fatal Burning Accident in Connecticut—The Joel Perkins Trial.

HARTFORD, Conn., April 27.—A little daughter of JOHN W. FRANK, in Wethersfield, yesterday, fell into a bonfire, and her clothing igniting, was so badly burned that she died during the night.....The trial of JOEL PERKINS, charged with incest and murder, was continued in Litchfield, yesterday. Five daughters testified, four of them asserting that they saw him strangle one child to death. PERKINS himself also testified, denying that he was guilty of murder, but confessing the other charges. The testimony was closed, and the arguments will begin to-morrow morning.

THE WEST.

Extensive Forgery in Cleveland—A Man Killed by His Son.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 27.—A man calling himself M. B. Van Ostrader, but whose real name is T. H. BIRD, of Lockport, N. Y., and E. SIMPSON, passed a forged note for $1,780 on EVERETT, WENDELL & Co., yesterday. The swindle was soon discovered, the guilty parties arrested and most of the money recovered.

M. M. KENNEDY, a farmer sixty years old, residing in Solon Township, was killed by his son, today. They had been on unfriendly terms for some months on account of property troubles. Early this morning the father went to his son's residence and informed him that he had come to take away a horse and buggy, and then clean out him and his wife. The old man entered the barn, followed by the son. When the son entered the father seized him by the throat and swore he would kill him. Believing he meant what he said, the son drew a revolver and fired three balls into his father's head before the latter fell.

Unsatisfactory Condition of the Indians in Kansas—Military Movements.

ST. LOUIS, April 27.—Col. TAYLOR, Paymaster United States Army, returned to Fort Leavenworth on Tuesday from Fort Sill, where he paid the troops at Forts Larned, Dodge and Sill, Camp Supply and the Cheyenne Agency. He says there are about 3,000 Indians at the Cheyenne Agency, mostly Arrapahoes and Cheyennes. The former tribe is very well disposed, but among the latter there seems to be a feeling of discontent, probably growing out of the appearance of surveying parties in the interest of railroad corporations. These Indians are very much opposed to the extension of railroads through their country. Ten chiefs, representing the principal tribes, have been invited to Washington, and it is likely that the railroad question will be discussed. LITTLE RAVEN will go on behalf of the Arrapahoes, and LITTLE ROBE or WILD HORSE will represent the Cheyennes. Should the Chiefs refuse to attend the proposed conference in Washington, trouble is to be feared this Summer. The Sixth Cavalry is moving from Fort Sill to Fort Harker, and will probably reach there about the middle of May. Two companies of the Tenth Cavalry are on the Red River. Company H, Sixth Infantry, is still at the Cheyenne Agency.

An Industrial Exposition in Cincinnati next Autumn—Railroad Matters.

CINCINNATI, April 27.—Steps will be taken this week for holding another great industrial exposition during the approaching Autumn. A. T. GOSHORN, yesterday, was elected President of the Joint Committee having the matter in charge.....Secretary BELKNAP is here, called by the sickness of his child.....At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company today, WILLIAM D. GARNSWORTH resigned the Presidency, and DANIEL TORRANCE, of New-York, was elected unanimously to fill the vacancy. Resolutions of regret were adopted at the resignation of Mr. GARNSWORTH, and thanking him for his management, restoring the credit of the Company, and putting the road in the best condition. Mr. GRISWOLD remains a director, and his salary as President is continued until October next.....The forty-sixth semi-annual session of the Grand Division Sons of Temperance of Ohio, was commenced in Williamsburg, Ohio, yesterday. About seventy delegates were present. The reports submitted indicate that the temperance work is proceeding favorably. Fifty subordinate divisions have been added during the past six months. Whole number of members now in the State, 13,000. JOHN GRUNDY, of Cincinnati, was elected Grand Scribe, vice H. V. HORTON deceased. Reports from many parts of the State show favorable results in the efforts to strictly enforce the law against liquor selling. The National Division was asked to admit members at the age of twelve years. The session will probably be adjourned to-morrow.....Bishop CLARK has somewhat improved during the past few days.

Patrick Duffy's Reported Pardon Denied.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 27.—The statement of the NEW-YORK TIMES as to the pardon of PATRICK DUFFY, contained in its article of to-day headed "Who Owns the Governor?" is a fabrication. No pardon has been granted. An application for the pardon of DUFFY was made on the 23d of November last, and on the 3d of December was denied by the Governor. The application has not since been renewed.

Sentence of Criminals in Poughkeepsie.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 27.—At the Ulster County Court Judge HOGEBOOM today sentenced R. OSTERHOUDT to three years' imprisonment in Sing Sing, for manslaughter in the third degree, and THOMAS BENNETT to five years for manslaughter in the second degree, the latter being charged with killing his wife, and the former with killing a man named AVERY. The case of TREWILLIGER, charged with killing his mother, has not yet been disposed of.

The German Peace Celebration in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., April 27.—The German Peace Celebration here is fixed for May 14, 15 and 16. Sunday is to be devoted to religious services, Monday to a grand parade, all the German societies taking part. The bakers, brewers and other trades will have wagons with men employed in their several employments. Thirty thousand persons will appear in procession. On Tuesday the fête will end with a picnic at the Old Rifle Club Grounds, now belonging to the Germans.

A TERRIBLE DISASTER.

Three Men Killed on a New-Jersey Railroad.

A Circus-Wagon Demolished—Several Men Badly Injured—Names of the Killed and Wounded.

At about 6½ o'clock yesterday morning a dreadful calamity occurred on the Central Railroad of New-Jersey, at Cranford, N. J., by which three men were killed and three others probably fatally injured. Barnum's Circus was on its way from Plainfield, which place it had left at 1 A. M., to Elizabeth, where a performance was to be given yesterday. In passing through Cranford, the road crosses the Central New-Jersey Railway track. The grade at this place is very heavy, and trains bound toward New-York pass down it an exceedingly rapid rate. Just as the provision caravan of the circus reached the track at this place, the 6½ train from Somerville came rushing down the heavy grade and struck the caravan almost in the centre, dashing it entirely to pieces. The wagon was drawn by four mules, the two at the poles being instantly killed.

The following are the names of the killed and injured:

THEODORE CONKLIN, the driver of the wagon, was thrown several feet from the wagon, and fell upon his head. His skull was fractured, and one leg was broken. He died instantly. He was twenty-seven years of age, and resided originally in Delevan, Wis., where his parents now live.

EDWARD DYER, a colored cook, had his neck dislocated, and died instantly. He was sleeping inside the wagon. He was thirty years of age, and lived in Williamsburg.

GEORGE SICKLES, assistant cook, also a resident of Williamsburg, had his skull fractured and his ribs broken. His death resulted soon after the accident occurred.

CHARLES GILL, a resident of No. 112 Thompson-street, New-York, received severe internal injuries, and was wounded upon the head and face. During the day he was insensible, and it is thought he will die before morning.

JOHN JOICE, son of JAMES F. JOICE, of Jersey City, and THOMAS WALSH, another lad from Jersey City, were severely hurt, being thrown a considerable distance by the locomotive. WALSH's shoulder is dislocated and his companion suffers from contusion of the brain. The physicians pronounce them in great danger, but say that there is a possibility of their recovery.

Dr. MARTIN, the surgeon of the Central Railroad at Somerville, was on the train, heard the bell rung and the whistle blown; before the train could be stopped they struck some of the wagons that was crossing; witness first saw the wagon and rang the bell; continued to ring it until the wagon was struck, although he knew there was not time to stop so as to avoid a collision.

EDWARD CLARK, the driver of the wagon that struck first, testified that he and his companion, when they crossed the track and saw the train approaching, shouted to the driver of the other wagon to stop; the wagon following was about twenty-five yards behind; did not hear the whistle before he crossed; did not think he ran any risk in attempting to cross; the driver of the other wagon was asleep.

ROMAINE RANDOLPH was walking on the track near the scene of the accident, and heard the whistle; also saw the driver of the advance wagon signal the other to stop; the latter did not seem to notice the signal. Several other witnesses gave testimony corroborating that of those whose testimony was then given to the jury. After an absence of nearly two hours the jury returned the following verdict:

"We find that the deceased accidentally and by misfortune, were run over and killed on the New-Jersey Central Railroad; and we further find that no blame is attached to the employes of the New-Jersey Central Railroad Company."

Movements of President Grant.

HARRISBURG, Penn., April 27.—President GRANT arrived at 10:26 this evening. He will remain here as the guest of Mr. J. D. CAMERON. He will leave for Washington at 10½ o'clock to-morrow forenoon.

A College Professor Arrested for Deserting His Family.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 27.—Dr. ALBION COBB, Principal of the Academy at Wilton, Me., was arrested by the Niagara Frontier Police this morning, charged with deserting his wife and four children and eloping with a young lady pupil, who was an invalid under his charge. COBB, on being arrested, denied bailing from Wilton. He is about fifty years of age. His victim is eighteen years old, good-looking and intelligent. She acknowledged all, and says her parents reside at Farmington, Me. Both parties are retained in custody, waiting instructions from Maine.

Up to a late hour there were no new developments in the case of Dr. COBB. Both parties are confined at Police Head-quarters awaiting orders from Maine. The name of the young girl is MARY L. DOW. Dr. COBB had rented and furnished rooms for an office and living-room, and hung out his shingle as practicing physician, but became frightened at the paragraph copied in a local paper, of his elopement with Miss DOW. He sold the furniture, packed his trunks and was about leaving on the Falls Railroad when both were arrested by detectives who were watching his movements.

The Maine Railroad Loans.

BANGOR, Me., April 27.—The vote on the Railroad Loan bills today was a full one, and was as follows: Loaning the credits of the city in aid of the Piscataquis Railroad—yeas 1,343, nays 466. On the Winterport Railroad loan—yeas 1,468, nays 342. Both roads will be rapidly pushed forward. The Winterport Road will connect this city with an open Winter port. The Piscataquis Road will be extended from Dover to Moosehead Lake.

THE SOUTH.

The Question of Color—Two Decisions in New-Orleans.

NEW-ORLEANS, April 27.—Two colored graduates of Howard University of the District of Columbia this morning made application to the Superior Court for admission to the Bar of this State. Their application was refused on the ground that although parties who have practiced before the Supreme Court in any State can be admitted upon motion before the Court, yet these candidates coming from a Territory do not come within the letter of the law, and they will have to pass an examination before a committee appointed by the Supreme Court before they can be admitted to practice. Judge DUNBAR gives Sheriff SANVIBEL, colored, $1,000 damages in the Eighth District Court in his suit against the proprietors of the Bank Saloon for $10,000 damages, for refusing to furnish refreshments on account of color.

The Memphis Races—Second Day.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 27.—The second day of the Spring meeting on the Memphis Course was well attended, notwithstanding the showery weather. The first race was for all ages, mile and a quarter dash, $20 entry, half forfeit, $10 if declared; Club adds $300. Colonel Johnson, Highhawk, Von Moltke, and Alice Ward paid forfeit; Bouquet, Sallie Farrell, Woodburn and Style started, and in that order went under the string. Time—2:18. The second race was a Sweepstakes for three-year olds; mile dash, $25 up, play or pay; Club adds $300. There were six entries, but two (Jeff. Davis and Lizzie Morrison) paid forfeit; Sentinel, Sir Rufus, Lady Fairchild and Hampton were the runners. The first named won. Time—1:49¾. The third and last race was for all ages; mile heats, $20 entry; half the purse and $400 added for winner.

LEGAL-TENDER CASES.

The Precise Condition of the Supreme Court Decisions—What They Are.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—It has been stated that the decision of the Supreme Court in regard to the legal-tender cases would be announced on Tuesday next, but it is now positively ascertained that the opinions of the majority and minority of the Court will not then be read; they will be reserved for the adjourned term, which commences Oct. 16. It is understood, however, that an elaborate opinion will be read on Monday, announcing the unanimous decision of the Court on a collateral point, sustaining the validity of gold contracts made since the passage of the Legal-tender act of 1862. There seems to be no reason to doubt that a majority of the Court, consisting of Justices MILLER, SWAYNE, DAVIS, STRONG and BRADLEY, will affirm the constitutionality of the said Legal-tender act, and decide that contracts made before the war, in which no special kind of money was mentioned, may be fulfilled by the payment of greenbacks. The minority, consisting of Chief-Justice CHASE, and Justices NELSON, FIELD and CLIFFORD, will dissent from this decision, and declare that in their opinion the Legal-tender act cannot constitutionally apply to any such contracts. Several important cases, which have been argued this term, will not be decided until after the expiration of the recess, among which is one from the Circuit Court of Kentucky, involving the question of the constitutionality of the Civil Rights bill. The case of KLEIN and PANDOUZ, involving the constitutionality of the so-called "Drake amendment," relating to the effect of pardons in the Court of Claims, will be held under advisement until October, and so also will be the case of WATSON et al. vs. JONES et al., involving a decision of the disputed rights to property of the Presbyterian Church North and South. The latter case, coming from Kentucky, has been very elaborately argued by an imposing array of distinguished counsel on both sides, but hopes are entertained that the differences will be accommodated, and an amicable settlement effected by the General Assemblies of the two Churches this Summer, and it is probably in this view that the Supreme Court reserves its decision. The case of WHITE vs. HART et al., on appeal from the Supreme Court of Georgia, involving the binding force of notes given for slaves before the issuance of the emancipation proclamation, will not be decided until the argument is heard in the smaller case of HOLMES vs. SEWELL, on appeal from the Circuit Court of Arkansas, which will not probably be reached before December next. The decision in the former case will turn upon the question whether the provision of the Georgia Constitution, prohibiting the enforcement of any debt the consideration of which was a slave or slaves, or the hire thereof, is in contravention of the article of the Constitution which declares that no State shall make any law impairing the obligation of contract. The decision of the Supreme Court rendered a few weeks ago in a case where a note for slaves was concerned, was determined by other considerations, and the impression prevalent in some quarters that the foregoing question was then decided is therefore erroneous.

THE WEATHER.

The Government Observations—Reports from Many Washington—The Storm.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 27—7½ P. M.—The barometer remains stationary on the Pacific coast, with brisk north-west winds. The weather remains sensibly unchanged at the Rocky Mountain stations. The low pressure, which was central Wednesday evening in Western Iowa, is now central over Lake Huron. Heavy rains have been experienced on the lakes and from Tennessee to New-Jersey. Fresh easterly winds, followed by brisk and high westerly winds, are reported from the Alleghany Mountains to Iowa. Brisk southerly winds have prevailed on Lake Ontario. The barometer has fallen but slightly in the Southern States, and has risen on the Gulf Coast. A heavy hail-storm is prevailing at Detroit.

PROBABILITIES.

It is probable that brisk and high westerly winds will be experienced for a short time on the lower lakes, followed by clearing-up weather on Friday. Partially cloudy and clearing weather is probable for the Ohio Valley and Lower Mississippi, and cloudy, followed by clearing weather, on the South Atlantic coast.

SUMMIT OF MOUNT WASHINGTON, April 27.—Observations at 7 P. M.: Barometer, 30.07, change minus .04; thermometer, 19°, no change; relative humidity, .92; wind, north-east; velocity of wind, thirty-four miles per hour. A storm of sleet set in about 6 P. M. Two remarkable atmospheric phenomena have shown themselves today. The first was a well-defined shadow of Mount Washington as sunrise, apparently twice as huge as Lafayette, near which it was situated. It looked like a black cloud having the exact shape of the mountain. The second was a solar halo exhibiting all the colors of the prism, about noon. These phenomena are rare, and are highly appreciated by those of us who have never seen them before. A friend has sent us some Spring flowers, which are the first of the season seen here.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 27.—A heavy easterly rain storm prevails at all points on the Hudson to-night.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—Dedicative winds continue to prevail in all central and northern parts of California, and the crops will certainly be damaged very extensively.

OUR ROYAL VISITORS.

Considerable Work Ahead for the City Magnates.

Alexis of Russia, the Old Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, Prince Arthur, the Princess Louise, the Marquis of Lorne, and the King of the Cannibal Islands, all Coming to New-York.

The gay world of fashion at Long Branch, Saratoga, Cape May, and "The Falls," is likely to be surfeited this Summer with an almost uninterrupted stream of Kings and Counts, Princes and Dukes, with gorgeous retinues of long-titled gentlemen, so numerous that it would be an absolute impossibility to enumerate them. First on the list, we have the youthful and handsome Grand Duke ALEXIS, of Russia. He is, as before published in the TIMES, the third son of the Czar, is said to be strikingly like his illustrious grandfather, the Emperor NICHOLAS, who was regarded in his day as the handsomest man in Europe. The young Grand Duke is an officer in the Russian Navy, and will come in an Imperial yacht, escorted by four vessels of war. His suite comprises a miniature army of dashing young noblemen, who will reach New-York by the middle of June.

THE RUSSIAN DUKE.

New-York's reception to Russia's handsome young Grand Duke will, doubtless, be a right regal one. As an earnest of what may be expected, a committee of our most prominent citizens have been appointed to make the necessary arrangements for a fitting welcome to the Prince ALEXIS and his suite, and their entertainment while in America. The Reception Committee met a few days ago, when the following gentlemen were named as officers and members of the Executive Committee: Mr. W. H. ASPINWALL, President; Mr. James E. Montgomery, Secretary; Mr. R. W. HOWES, Treasurer; Messrs. Moses H. Grinnell, E. W. Stoughton, Wm. B. Duncan, Gen. Irwin McDowell, United States Army; Rear-Admiral Godon, United States Navy; Messrs. R. Lennox Kennedy, Wm. T. Blodgett, D. Taylor Johnston, L. P. Morton, A. Bierstadt, Henry Clews, S. J. Macy, S. L. M. Barlow, Theodore Roosevelt, Howard Potter and Gen. Lloyd Aspinwall. The Committee have gone zealously to work, and the simple perusal of the names on the list gives assurance that there will be nothing niggardly in New-York's ovation to the majesty of Russia.

OLD DUKE ERNEST.

The old Duke ERNEST, of SAXE-COBURG-GOTHA, the brother of the late Prince ALBERT, Queen VICTORIA's husband, is the next royal visitor, and will arrive about the 1st of July. Duke ERNEST's potato patch of a principality has already been in a manner gobbled up in the recent amalgamation of the German States. The Duke, it is said, will be accompanied by his wife, the Duchess ALEXANDRINE, of Baden. The royal pair are childless, the nephew of the Duke, Prince ALFRED, of England, better known as the Duke of EDINBURGH, being the heir apparent to the dukedom. Duke ERNEST will make the tour, it is understood, of the Eastern and Western States.

THE DUKE OF SAXONY.

Then comes GEORGE, Duke of Saxony, the third son of King JOHN of Saxony. Duke GEORGE is a handsome, fine-looking soldier Prince, and is but thirty-eight years of age. He will, it is reported, reach the States about the same time as his cousin, the Grand Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, and will likewise, after "doing" the different springs and sea-side retreats, (?) make a tour through the Eastern States and across the continent to the Pacific. By the way, the Duke of Saxony belongs to one of the oldest reigning houses of Europe. It gave an Emperor to Germany at the beginning of the tenth century. There are two branches of the illustrious race. The Ernestine line represented by the Dukes of Saxe-Altenburg, Saxe-Coburg-Gotha and Saxe-Weimar. Meissnach is the eldest, and the Albertine the younger branch, of which the royal house of Saxony is the head, and our ducal visitor a distinguished member.

PRINCE ARTHUR.

It is rumored that Prince ARTHUR, of England, will return to Canada as its Viceroy, and the rumor comes to us from a rather authentic source, yet the probable appointment of His Royal Highness has been contradicted, and the possible visit of the Marquis of LORNE and his fair bride, the Princess LOUISE, is spoken of among diplomatic circles, as being contemplated in their route to Ottawa to preside over Her Britannic Majesty's Canadian possessions.

At any rate, if New-York is not to be gratified by a picture of vice-regal magnificence from England, it will, at least in a measure, be compensated by the imposing spectacle of royalty itself, in the person of KING THAKAMBAU II., of the Kingdom of Feejee. His Majesty of the Cannibal Islands visits the great Republic in August, in order chiefly to arrange for the instruction of his promising heir-apparent, Prince TETTOWAKTOO. Both royal father and son are coffee-colored, and somewhat inclined to plethora, superinduced, it is whispered, by an inordinate fondness for the ardent, and as it is presumed that His Majesty and son will receive a greeting worthy of their exalted station and in consonance with their tastes, it behooves our illustrious Board of Aldermen not to ignore entirely in their preparations the potent merits of Sixth Ward lightning.

KING THAKAMBAU.

King THAKAMBAU, it is said, is in some dimunity in consequence of some of his subjects having, a few years ago, eaten the crews of two American vessels for which the Government of His Sable Majesty is called upon to settle, finding himself unable to pay the indemnity claimed by the United States Government for the benefit of the wives and children of the murdered crimsons, his possessions have already been mortgaged for the payment of the indemnity, and he now comes to Washington to again offer it, it is said, to sell the three Islands to the United States.

Besides the above distinguished personages there will be not a few monarchs who will cross the Atlantic this Summer to seek at Long Branch and Saratoga the tranquillity of republican simplicity.

WASHINGTON.

The Joint High Commission and its Work—How the Treaty will Probably be Treated—The Extra Session of the Senate—Mr. Sumner's Speech—Miscellaneous Matters.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—There is a prospect that the ratification of the treaty formed by the High Commission will be considered in the Senate entirely as a national question, and not at all in a party spirit. There has not been as yet the slightest indication that Democrats or Republicans will make a party issue upon it, or that those who have opposed the Administration in measures of political or general policy, will make opposition to this as an Administration measure. It would be very remarkable if every Senator should find in the settlement all that he might wish, and objections are, of course, likely to be raised, but if any decide to oppose the confirmation by speeches and votes, they will be compelled to show better cause than if objecting to the confirmation of an officer in the civil service. If the honor of the American people is not compromised by the action of our Commission, their labor must certainly be approved. As evidence that no dishonorable retreat has been made from the position our country has all along held, it may be stated that a Senator who has always held the most extreme position in reference to our rights, and who is well informed as to the terms of the treaty, expresses himself satisfied, and predicts that the session will not last over a week. All along the views of Senators of both parties have been sought, and considered by the Commissioners with a view to meet, as nearly as possible, the views and demands of the collective sentiment of the Senate and the people. If, as is stated, one or two Senators have already begun the preparation of speeches against the treaty, they must show clearly how they were able to condemn it with such haste, or leave a suspicion of having acted from hostility to the Administration, which latter reason, in a question of such gravity as the present, will not receive the applause of the people.

THE CABINET.

The rumors of Cabinet changes which have been constantly afloat since the adjournment of Congress do not appear to have any better foundation than the similar stories told before the meeting of Congress, in December last, and everybody remembers how the positive statements then made failed of verification. In regard to Mr. BOUTWELL, his removal, or resignation, for some months to come, would seem impossible, and it is so regarded by those best informed. He cannot afford to resign in the midst of the execution of the refunding policy, which he has labored so long to initiate. If it is to succeed at all, it must be under the direction of its author, who has faith in it, and Mr. BOUTWELL must feel this, and be unwilling to risk its failure in other hands. Nor would the President be likely to ask his retirement so long as the failure or success of the policy is not determined. He must at least allow the Secretary, whom he has permitted to go thus far, to have a fair opportunity to conclude what he has undertaken, if he can; and what is more, the personal relations between the two, are not less cordial than they always have been. Till these conditions are all changed Cabinet rumors which displace Mr. BOUTWELL may be deemed unfounded. It is not unlikely that in case the Senate should confirm the treaty, with Great Britain, Mr. FISH will soon after ask to be relieved of the portfolio of State. But even this is mere conjecture, as no such a determination on his part is publicly known, and he is quite as likely to remain till Fall. The Cabinet-makers have not undertaken for a long time to reconstruct the rest of the Cabinet, probably discouraged by their numerous failures, and it may consequently be considered as not wanting repairs.

THE EXTRA SESSION OF THE SENATE.

It is not certain that any executive business, except the treaty with Great Britain, will be laid before the extra session of the Senate, by the President, though a few nominations may be sent in. The law does not make the submission of appointments to an extra session of the Senate obligatory, and if any nominations are made, it will be in a few cases where convenience, rather than necessity, dictates.

MR. SUMNER'S SPEECH.

Mr. SUMNER's speech concerning his personal relations with Secretary FISH is in type at the Globe office. There are some mysterious whispers of astounding disclosures, but nothing of that sort should be expected. He has already made to numerous persons all the revelations he has to make, and they have been published, piecemeal and collectively. He may, however, have introduced some documentary evidence, and that indeed is stated, to sustain some of the charges he has made through newspaper writers. If an answer as effective as the answer to Mr. MOTLEY should emanate in some manner from a like source, Mr. SUMNER should not be surprised. It is reported here that JAMES M. MASON, whose illness was noted last night, is not likely to survive through to-night or to-morrow.

Dispatch to the Associated Press

THE NEW LOAN.

Subscriptions to the new loan today, $168,000; balance in the Treasury at the close of business today, coin, $106,190,000; currency, $9,745,000; coin certificates, $21,320.

RECEIPTS OF CUSTOMS.

The customs receipts for the week ending April 15 were as follows: New-York, $6,020,227; Philadelphia, $155,907; Boston, $402,814; Baltimore, $188,563. Total, $6,819,460.

REVENUE MATTERS.

Commissioner PLEASONTON has written a letter to Supervisor DUTCHER, of New-York, relative to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of BUFFINGTON, plaintiff in error, vs. DAY, which holds "that the salaries of all necessary agents for the legitimate purposes of State Government are not proper subjects of the taxing power of Congress." In consideration thereof, the Commissioner states: "Collectors and Assessors will, therefore, be instructed to govern themselves according to this decision in assessing and collecting the incomes of State officers." Collector R. M. WALLACE, of the Third South Carolina District, reports to the Internal Revenue Commissioner, that on the 20th inst., JAMES B. SHERMAN, Deputy United States Marshal, and Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue, while making a seizure of contraband whisky at Greenville, S. C., was approached from behind and struck on the head with a piece of wood. It is supposed that his skull was crushed. On the afternoon of the 21st he was not expected to live twenty-four hours.

TRANSFER OF GOLD COIN.

The United States Treasurer today made a telegraphic transfer of $300,000 in gold from the Sub-Treasury at San Francisco to the Sub-Treasury at New-York, through the Bank of California. The coinage of the Mint of the United States at Philadelphia, for the first quarter ending March 31, 1870, was, in gold, $971,345; silver, $225,240; copper and bronze, $60,800. The coinage of the Branch Mint in San Francisco for the same period was: In gold, $2,434,000; silver, $301,725. The coinage of the Branch Mint at Carson City was: Gold, $12,760; silver, $15,012. The deposits of bullion at the United States Assay Office in New-York for the same period was: $1,126,917; silver, $365,666. The deposits at the Branch Mint at Denver: In gold and silver, $220,350.

THE SOUTHERN CLAIMS.

The Southern Claims Commission today considered the claims of Mrs. MARGARET BOWIE, GEORGE W. MITCHELL and GEORGE TRICKER, all of Manassas, Va., for various descriptions of supplies taken by the United States troops of BLENKER's Division in 1861 and 1862, amounting in the aggregate to $11,800 20. Thus far there have been some 500 claims filed before the Commission, amounting on paper to $2,500,000. Of this number and this amount it is not probable that a twentieth part will be allowed, unless Congress hereafter extends the existing laws so as to compensate loyal people in all the States for damages or depredations suffered by them during the occupancy of their neighborhoods by the United States Army, instead of confining the compensation, as now, to cases where stores or supplies were actually remitted for the use of the army.

A PATENT DECISION.

In the interference case, between the application of JOHN HILEY, of Troy, N. Y., for a composition for coating steam boilers and a patent granted to A. C. BAUMAN, of New-York City, for a similar patent, on appeal from the Board of Examiners-in-Chief, the decision of the Board awarding the priority of invention to HILEY has been sustained by the Acting Assistant Commissioner of Patents.

THE NEW PLANET.

Commodore R. F. SANDS, of the United States Naval Observatory, writes to the Secretary of the Navy that the new planet discovered by Dr. LUTHER at Bilk, near Dusseldorf, was observed here by Prof. HALL, on the 22d inst., as follows: Right ascension, 11 hours, 38 minutes, 7 seconds, north declination, 11 degrees, 2 minutes, 31 seconds. The new planet is of the eleventh magnitude, and is the 113th of the minor planets. It has been named by the Berlin astronomers, "Amalthea."

PERSONAL.

Treasurer SPINNER is still in feeble health. Having had a chill last night, he remained in his house today, but is said to be now improving.

COAL MATTERS.

Partial Resumption Continued by Plucky Operators.

Some of the Mines at Work and Others Preparing.

More Stubborn Rejections by the Exasperated Miners.

Another Series of Frothy Resolutions Adopted.

Three of the Companies Refuse All Arbitration.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SCRANTON, Penn., April 27.—The men in the employ of GRANT & Co., who went on a strike yesterday, resumed work this morning of their own accord. This Company will continue to ship coal unless prevented by violence. HILL & YELLOWS are still turning out their usual amount of coal for local trade only. MORRIS & WEEKS are working six men today in their mine, several others will go in to-morrow. This is a plucky firm, and they will mine and ship coal, though a new set of men have to be employed every day. At the rolling-mill mine I can also report favorable progress, though the works are not yet all in running order. Arrangements for resumption at Tripp's Slope are being made, and if men can be procured operations will begin on Monday. Work will be resumed at the Wilkesbarre Coal and Iron Company's Works and at breakers Nos. 6 and 9, belonging to the Larne Company, on Monday next.

The delegates representing the miners of three companies, will hold a meeting at Hyde Park to-morrow morning, for the purpose of considering the answer made by the directors of the companies to their invitation to meet them, as submitted on Tuesday. It is likely that the delegates will make some other offer, but it will amount to nothing, like all preceding attempts. The Republican of to-morrow morning will contain an editorial, an extract from which is as follows:

"That the difficulties between the miners and operators in Schuylkill County will be adjusted, seems probable; and the men here, or rather their leaders, are comforting themselves with the false hope that when Schuylkill stares, the coal trade of the Lehigh and Wyoming will insist on them to offer terms to the men in order to prevent Schuylkill from monopolizing the market. We heard only yesterday a leader of the Working Men's Benevolent Association use this argument to some of the men. This is a groundless hope, and to avoid resumption upon any such plan was the first object in the great combination of association between the different carrying companies. The companies and the men are no nearer together now than they were months ago. The companies stand on their original offer of eighty-six cents per diamond car, and the leaders of the Working Men's Benevolent Association refuse to accept it. Meetings have been held, delegates have been appointed, propositions made to the companies, which the miners knew beforehand would be rejected. When resumption takes place, it will be general throughout the anthracite regions. Unless there is a new and unexpected independent movement, by which the power of the leaders is wrested from their hands, we see no prospect for resumption before the 1st of June, and perhaps not then. The only thing that will end it sooner is by the men accepting the offer of the companies, or commencing work without any fixed price, leaving that to be settled subsequently."

The Miners' Executive Board on Their Dignity—They Reject the Operators' Proposition.

POTTSVILLE, Penn., April 27.—A meeting of the Executive Board of the Working Men's Benevolent Association was held at Pottsville this afternoon, and the following resolutions were adopted by a vote of 25 to 10:

Whereas, A committee of operators made a proposition directly to the men, and agreed to consider the question shall cease to be protective in its character; and,

Whereas, We regard said proposition as a bribe to the men to surrender the basis upon which the protection shall cease to be protective in its character; and,

Whereas, Even at such great cost, the men are not guaranteed steady work during the year; therefore,

Resolved, That we cannot accept of said proposition.

Mr. WILLIAMS, from No. 9 District, voted against the resolution, because he was instructed by his district to accept, conditionally, the proposition of the operators. He, and others who voted nay, guaranteed that their constituencies will abide by the above decision.

On motion of Mr. RYAN, the following resolution was adopted:

INTERESTING CORRESPONDENCE.

EUROPEAN TOPICS.

The Wrecked Helms of the Reds in Paris—Rapid Progress of Democracy in Europe—The People and Rulers of Mankind—Disestablishment of the Church and the House of Lords—Religious Movements—Mr. Darwin's Last Book.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Thursday, April 13, 1871.

The eyes of Europe, and I think it must be the same in America, are turned on the revolution in Paris. An English paper finds that it is a case of secession—Paris separating from France, as the Southern States wished to separate from the Northern in America. But this scarcely explains the matter. The Socialist Reds want not to be separated from France, but to govern France. They have a theory of National Government and a city cannot live apart from the country that feeds it. What the Reds wish is that all property shall become national, that every one should work for the Government, drawing pay and rations like soldiers. All for all, and each provided for by all:

"All the rights, duties, and institutions emanating from the present condition of things, with the 'infamies' of jurisprudence, police, and 'religion,' will have no place in the new social order; children will be adopted by the State, and men and women will be allowed to 'marry and remarry' as often as they please."

The way in which the war is carried on in Paris cannot last. A few fanatics, or rogues, and a certain number of deluded followers, or mercenaries. These are employed to hunt up and force into the ranks a much greater number. The starving are gathered to be fed, and so caught for soldiers. Thousands have fled from Paris to avoid the Red conscription. Even the civil officers of the Commune are forced to serve. A man who carries on a large washing business, and knows how to do nothing else, was forced to become Minister of the Interior. If he resigns he will be sent to prison; so he waits, fears to disturb the papers which he does not in the least understand, and makes his protest to those he can trust, for future use. In the Commune, the member who goes against the majority is sent to prison. The Archbishop, the chief clergy, the members of religious orders, are in prison, and churches and religious houses are plundered. It wants only the massacres and guillotine, and these may come if M. THIERS delays much longer. It is not easy to take Paris without destroying Paris. Street fighting is a murderous business, and favorable to those who act upon the defensive. To bombard or starve Paris is to punish nine-tenths of the people for the faults of the other tenth. Artillerymen of the army have been seized, and with a pistol at their heads made to serve the Red artillery; compelled to fire shells at their fellow-soldiers on pain of being shot. Men who detest the Commune are marched out to be killed by those who are fighting against it. All idea of liberty is lost. There is no liberty of speech—against the Commune; no liberty of the Press, for journals are suppressed and editors imprisoned; no liberty of conscience, where churches are plundered and the clergy shut up; no liberty of movement, for it is forbidden to leave Paris. An Englishman just returned from Paris says:

"It seems as if a few madmen had got the upper hand in a city full of excellent, civil, good-natured, pugnacious, vain, ignorant Celts, who attribute every misfortune to some traitor. 'We are betrayed,' and everything is wrong, except as the Emperor is a canaille, that is known; TROCHU is another; so is JULES FAVRE. The Assembly had best disperse. The Assembly has gone; the Assembly is a traitor. Our Generals are fools.' Everybody (excepting only the speaker) is something worthy only of supreme contempt; and everything is wrong, except as about Paris. Like a fish, Paris is all head. It flaps its wings and paddles its legs as if it were alive. The streets are swept and carefully watered, the cafés are open, the busses and railroads go on as usual. To all outward appearance the city goes on as if there were nothing unusual about it. But mount a hill and look at it, and there is civil war raging furiously, while the damaged head is uttering incoherent nonsense in proclamations 'full of sound and fury signifying nothing,' and in journals that seem to be the ravings of downright obscene insanity."

The National Guards seem to have fought well—far better than against the Prussians, whom they may have again to encounter. And the scene around the Arc de Triomphe during the heaviest fighting at the bridge of Neuilly, was such as no city but Paris could present:

"Groups of National Guards awaiting orders and quarreling loudly among themselves; slovenly crowd enough, like a party of bandits on the watch—a medley of anxious women, with bread and wine tied up in handkerchiefs for the delectation of some wretched creature, father or husband, who was measuring his strength with shot—knots of two or three patriots talking earnestly and low, as to the evidently left flank battalion 'in search of ammunition'—two or three ladies clad in gorgeous garments, and remnants of a Paris now defunct, gossiping of fashions and the latest play—vendors of opera-glasses and of 'cœurs d'orge.' The proprietor of the big telescope, so well known on the Place Vendôme on clear-light nights, had brought up his instrument to this new scene of action, and offered a peep of the battle at the modest sum of one sous. Trade seemed likely to prosper in a small way, the sun shone as only a Paris sun in Spring can shine, people forgot their woes, and were becoming inclined for a cheerful day out, when a piece of iron put an end to the discussion. A cold-blooded shell tore through the air, ending in a lead explosion. Down went the telescope amid a general scuffle, the crowd flew right and left, hiding behind lamp-posts and the shadows of projecting cornices, and the horrid truth became apparent that the Arab of Triumph, the Arab of Battle, had actually hit the Arab of Triumph, leaving the regreach of a dog-blooded car as the white smoke curled and cleared away. For half of five minutes, and the crowd again came back; the cannonading down below increased in intensity."

Fancy batteries in the Central Park firing down the Fifth-avenue! And here is poor Monsieur THIERS, who built the defenses of Paris, kept out by his own forts and enceinte, while Mont Valerien is battering down the Porte de Maillot, and marring with its shells the very house and monuments it was armed to protect!

DEMOCRATIC EXPRESSIONS IN ENGLAND.

The London Reds have been making small demonstrations of sympathy with their brethren in Paris, with red flags, liberty-caps, resolutions and speeches. The speeches take the ultra socialist view of civilization as the culmination of the world's evil condition—the poor robbed by the rich; the idle living in luxury on the labor of half-starved and miserable workmen; the builders of sumptuous mansions kenneled in holes and garrets; the makers of clothes in rags and nakedness; the agricultural laborer, who raises corn and cattle, living on a scanty provision of bread and cheese; and those who support palaces dying in the workhouse. But far more important than these speeches of obscure demagogues on Clerkenwell-green, were the admissions made a few days ago by Hon. AUBERON HERBERT, M. P., in a speech to his constituents, the lovely lambs of Nottingham. It was to defend his vote in favor of the dowry to the Princess LOUISE. The dowries, he said, had been given as compensations for bad, unnatural and hateful political marriages, and why should the Princess be fined for making a reasonable, sensible, and natural marriage? Still, he agreed with the meeting that no national payments should be made but for services rendered. But he was unwilling to apply that principle during the life-time of the present Queen, yet he considered the nation free to make any arrangement it liked with her successor—with any person whom we make our chief officer of this country. [Cries of "A President."] This was going pretty well along in the Republican direction, and the super-royal Press has denounced him as if he were a second BONAPARTE.

And when you look at it you cannot wonder. Here is the brother of a noble Lord quite ready to pension off the Prince of WALES and elect a President. Only a feeling of delicacy or gallantry toward a woman, who has not behaved badly on the whole, though she may have neglected many duties, hinders him from bringing the reigning Sovereign to a strict account. He insists that all of what is called the royal property is, in fact, national property, belongs to the people, and should be used according to their wishes. Could he go much further?

DISESTABLISHMENT OF THE CHURCH AND LORDS.

And now is to come the question of the disestablishment of two other pillars of the British Constitution, the Church and the House of Lords. The disestablishment of the Church will be moved in the House of Commons this session, and very few persons believe that it will last ten years longer. If the Lords detest the Ballot bill the whole ultra-Liberal Party will join with the nascent, crescent Republican Party to carry out Mr. BRIGHT's threat of pitching them into the Thames. There will be a Peerage Reform agitation in England which may end in the abolition of all hereditary privileges, and which, if carried out to its logical conclusion, will lead to a redistribution of landed property over the British Islands; for, if a man is not born a Duke, a Marquis, an Earl, why should he inherit whole counties of land which are as much national property as the Crown lands are, according to the member for Nottingham?

RAPID ADVANCE OF DEMOCRACY IN EUROPE.

The advance of democracy in Europe is very marked, and to some people very alarming. And democracy here is not the milk-and-water affair it is in America. Democrats are socialists, and not in the least content with abolishing Kings. They want nothing less than the destruction of society as it is, and the reconstruction of society as it should be. New journals are springing up all over the continent to advocate democratic-social doctrines—four in Belgium, two in Switzerland, four in Spain, three in Holland, several in Germany, I know not how many in Paris. The International Trades-union is socialistic—at least on the continent—and the English working men are being educated. The Irish have complained for a long time of the absenteeism which has been a constant drain upon the resources of their country, but every year the English have more and more cause to make the same complaints. The money drawn from the laboring millions in England is spent on the Continent, and of late the English nobility have selected Egypt for a Winter residence. The Duke of SUTHERLAND, the Duke of HAMILTON, Earl DUDLEY and others, have been spending the Winter at Cairo, and beautiful houses are being built on every side to accommodate future visitors. The Duke of SUTHERLAND has got a piece of land from the Viceroy, and has begun a magnificent palace, to be furnished with every kind of Oriental luxury, except, of course, the harem. The question is, how long poverty-stricken populations, when once instructed in political economy and the rights of man, will allow a large part of the proceeds of their labor to be carried so far out of their reach. And how far will the work of disestablishment be carried when England, as well as France, has universal suffrage and the ballot? Quo vadis, servi? and they need not live very long.

ENGLAND GOING TO PERDITION.

I have often given slight and imperfect notices of English life, but the following report of the condition of portions of the rich and important town of Bradford, by one of the census enumerators, is a fresh contribution to social science:

"I found houses filled from cellar to garret with families, each family—in some cases five and six in number—occupying one apartment, some with two beds and others with three, the cellars generally being more crowded than the upper rooms. Some of these families, where the father, mother, and one or two children were employed in the mills, must be in receipt of a handsome weekly sum, receiving more money, probably, than many cleanly people, and yet they are found in filthy places, herding together in squalor, and sleeping on beds which made one's flesh creep to approach."

And, in spite of education movements, wide-spread journalism, and a cheap Press constantly increasing its issues, Mr. FROUDE is of opinion that what we call progress is really decadence, and that England is rapidly going to perdition. Her commercial prosperity is merely successful mammon worship; the spread of comforts and luxuries tends to the disorganization of society, and is destructive of mutual trust and love; the advance of education is only apparent and superficial. What is wanted for England is a vigorous Government, industrial training, emigration, and, as a last resort, he has lately added Calvinism, on the ground, perhaps, that desperate cases require desperate remedies.

"IGNORANCE OF AMERICANS."

As you know, I do all I can to enlighten my countrymen respecting the English Government and English society—we need it so. The London Times, which I always quote with awe, speaking in a recent number of "the ignorance of the American public," says:

"A half-educated American knows even less of English Government than a half-educated Englishman knows of American Government. All monarchies in the eyes of such a man are equally tyrannical, and all Republican movements are equally to be admired. * * * It is the reproach of American politics that an Irish colony, which native Americans hate and despise with a fear more than Anglo-Saxon arrogance, is nevertheless petted and applauded in its wildest demonstrations of hostility to Great Britain without protest from those who know better, and with a painful disregard not only of international courtesy, but of national dignity."

TREATMENT OF GERMANS IN ENGLAND.

A German paper complains that German officers in uniform, and even out of uniform, have recently been mobbed and maltreated in the streets of London. There has been no notice of any such outrage in any London journal, and I doubt the truth of the statement; but if it were so, the Marquis of BURE has more than atoned for it, for he has munificently refunded the dock dues paid for all German ships detained in the port of Cardiff during the war. It is a fine thing to be a Marquis and own a flourishing seaport, but a much finer thing to be able to make a generous and noble use of a magnificent fortune, remove national prejudices and cement national friendships. Such acts go far to reconcile people to the existence of high privileges and great fortunes. One might soon tolerate Kings if they were but kindly.

RELIGIOUS.

Mr. VOYSEY, lately condemned for heresy and deprived of his living as an Anglican clergyman, is preaching round in Unitarian chapels, when he can get an invitation, but expects to have one of his own soon in London. He preached on Easter Sunday at the Free Christian Church, Kentish Town; and, as appropriate to the day on which the resurrection of Christ is celebrated, he denied the resurrection, and said he did not believe that Christ actually died when He was crucified. PILATE made an arrangement with the soldiers, and before He was dead He was taken to the sepulchre, restoratives applied, and He made His escape disguised as a gardener. It is probable that this persecuted Anglican will gather a large congregation. Any clever man can do that with any doctrine. There is to be a Hindoo Temple built in London, and you may not be surprised at hearing of numerous converts to Buddhist worship, which has some features that will be highly appreciated in the great metropolis. There may be a mosque in London. The Queen has generously given one to some of her Mohammedan subjects in India. In orderly piety, integrity and sobriety, Mussulmen, by all accounts, would shame the great majority of Christian Englishmen.

MR. DARWIN'S LAST BOOK.

Mr. DARWIN's last book is a hard dose to swallow, and it gets plenty of denunciation and ridicule. The Roman Catholic Bishop GOSS, of Liverpool, in his Easter sermon, after condemning the late Royal marriage in Lent, and the Communistic revolution in Paris, as results of a growing Atheism—a godlessness that left man with no government but his own selfishness—said there were men who were publishing learned books in which they discussed the question of what sort of animals were our progenitors. Not content with a paternity of apes, they now sought to find our prototypes in submarine animals. Sir ALEXANDER GRANT thinks there is nothing atheistical in Mr. DARWIN's book—it is rather a system of natural theology on a new basis. He does not think, however, that the theory which makes the mind of a NEWTON or a SHAKESPEARE differ from that of a clam or oyster only in degree of development can be accepted as philosophical. The Times condemns the theory with great severity, in a review of nearly two pages. But I prefer to all the reviews a portion of a poem in Blackwood, in which Mr. DARWIN is supposed to say, or sing, as follows:

"Man comes from a mammal that lived up a tree,
And a great coat of hair on his outside had he;
Very much like the Dreadnoughts we frequently see—
Which nobody can deny.

He had points to his ears and a tail to his rump,
To assist him with ease through the branches to jump—
In some cases quite long, and in some a mere stump—
Which nobody can deny.

This mammal, abounding most grievously, grubs
Was thought worthy in time to be raised from the dubs
And with some small ado came to stand on two stumps—
Which nobody can deny.

Thus planted, his course he so prudently steered,
That his hand soon improved and his intellect cleared;
Then his forehead enlarged and his tail disappeared—
Which nobody can deny.

'Tis n't easy to settle when man became man;
When the monkey-type stopped and the human began;
But some very queer things were involved in the plan—
Which nobody can deny.

Women plainly had beards and big whiskers at first;
While the man supplied milk when the baby was nursed;
And some older strong facts I could tell—if I dared—
Which nobody can deny.

Our arboreal sire had a pedigree, too;
The marsupial system comes here into view;
So we'll trace him, I think, to a great kangaroo—
Which nobody can deny.

This kangaroo's parent, perhaps, was a bird;
But an ornithorhynchus would not be absurd;
Then to frogs and strange fishes we back are to-jerked—
Which nobody can deny.

The rest is good, but not so good as this, and so I spare you.

MONADNOCK.

The High Commission—The International Question—What Americans Abroad are Doing—The Church Question—Feeling in England on Continental Matters—The Temperance Movement.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, April 15, 1871.

The report which reached us on Monday morning, that the High Commission has settled the fisheries question, and is in a fair way of settling the Alabama question, has given great and general satisfaction. The public at large, taking it through all its various sections, is heartily and sincerely glad that there is now a good prospect of a settlement of the questions which have so long stood between us. If the news turns out not to be well founded it will be a great disappointment over here. While on this point I may say that Gen. SHERIDAN, Gen. FORSYTH, and Commodore ROGERS, who are with us just now, are doing a great deal to cement international relations. They have created an extremely favorable impression among the various classes with whom they have been brought in contact. English people are much comforted to hear Commodore ROGERS' high opinion of their moral strength. Gen. SHERIDAN, I understand, still adheres to his conviction of the superiority of the Remington rifle, for practical military use, over the Snider, Martini-Henry, Chassepot, and needle gun, but he is disposed to own to one or two improvements of which it is capable, and he thinks well of the English big gun.

ENGLAND'S MORAL STRENGTH.

At the Lord Mayor's dinner on Easter Monday, Mr. GOSCHEN made a speech which quite chimes in with the public feeling of the moment. At the beginning of the year everybody, as I told you, was suffering from a very downcast and self-depreciatory mood. Everything seemed to be going wrong. But the fit of dejection soon passed off. The war ended, and people became satisfied that the Government had done the right thing all through. The Conference gave Russia all she wanted, and we discovered in this result a great diplomatic triumph for England. And now Mr. GOSCHEN, amid the cheers of the civic guests, rises to protest against the suspicion with which Europe regards our superior morality, proclaims England the "most single-minded of nations in its foreign policy," and rebukes his countrymen for their absurd tendency to speak ill of themselves. He contrasted "the disinterested neutrality" of England with the "sinister policy" of some Continental States," and declared that "public opinion in this country was like a good strong horse rather out of condition with being fed only on green meat." This may be true, but at the same time it is a pity that anything should be said to weaken the impression that we really are out of condition, and very much out of condition, both mentally and physically. We have been too much in clover, and want bracing up a little. We are becoming the Hamlet of European politics, "sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought," and enervated by intellectual doubts and balancings. To be strong we must have a distinct, decided policy, and it is our want of this, our halting between two opinions, which exposes us to suspicion, and, in some measure, contempt. There is nothing I feel more sure of than this, that what England lacks is not military force, but a firm grasp of a clearly-defined policy.

FEELING ON THE FRENCH SITUATION.

The prevailing tone of the English Press on the subject of the civil war in France might, perhaps, lead you to suppose that there is a universal feeling on our side of sympathy for the Versailles party and horror of the "Reds." I find in private talk a marked tendency among moderate and thoughtful men to discriminate between the excesses of the Commune and the political principles which underlie it; and also to make allowance for the exasperation and madness produced by a long period of political oppression. Mr. WINTERBOTHAM, the new Under Secretary for the Home Office, in his first speech since he became a Minister, has had the manliness and candor to speak very frankly on this matter to his constituents. "Let them consider," he said, "that Paris expelled the ORLEANS family in 1848, the Republic they established was overthrown, and an Empire maintained for twenty years, all against the will of the people of Paris. There never was a day in the history of that Empire when they would not have got rid of it if they could. They were overruled by the provinces of France—kept down, in fact, by the peasantry. Indeed, at the present moment, when that dynasty had led them to war, and all this dreadful ruin, they found themselves with an Assembly, nominally representing their opinions, but pledged by a large majority to the restoration of the ORLEANS family, and the Government which they overthrew in 1848. It was not in human nature that men who had suffered so dreadfully from deception should trust these men so readily again." Mr. WINTERBOTHAM is by no means alone in his way of thinking; but it required a good deal of pluck and independence for a young man, just entering official life, to say anything in mitigation of a course so shocking to the respectable classes. Already there has been a bowl from some of the Tory papers. I may remark incidentally that Mr. WINTERBOTHAM seems disposed to carry his independence into his personal relations with the Premier. In explaining that office had come to him and that he had not gone out of his way to seek it, he said "he did not sit, as some did, with his knees in Mr. GLADSTONE's back, or his arms around his neck," he sat at a respectful distance, and did not hesitate to express differences of opinion which arose between Mr. GLADSTONE and his thoroughly hearty supporters." In fact Mr. WINTERBOTHAM opposed in the most determined manner Mr. GLADSTONE's pet scheme for giving the church a good hold on the national education. He is a Chancery barrister, about thirty-five years of age, and has been four years in Parliament. In sacrificing his large practice he gives up, I imagine, something which is of no great pecuniary value, and he confessed to his constituents that he cared very little about it. As a speaker and thinker he may best be described as "sturdy." There is a rude force about him which is sure to make its mark, and official life will rub off some of the roughness. Altogether, he is likely to be heard from hereafter.

The little Comtist sect among us, which is very loud though small, has also undertaken the public defense of the insurgents, but on a more extended scale. Dr. J. H. BRIDGES, who is a kind of high priest in this queer church, second only to Mr. CONGREVE himself, denies that the working men of Paris are fighting for Communism in the sense of a community of goods. He admits, however, that it is probable their legislation may have a strong Communistic flavor. "Work and wages may be found for men out of work. Taxation may be so regulated that its burden shall fall upon the rich in the first instance, instead of on the poor. These measures need not overstep the limits of the practical and practicable." But surely all this is Communism, as it is generally understood. If the lower classes are to be made permanently sure of wages, and relieved from taxation, it is difficult to see what more Socialism can claim for them." Prof. BEESLY, one of the younger Comtists, rejoices that the "idiotic cackle" about the cowardice of the French workmen "has died away into blank and objectless dismay." The only cowardice which has yet been established (and here, I think, facts are with him) is middle class cowardice:

"The well-dressed friends of order, the men with shiny silk hats and delicately-gloved hands, are not storming the barricade on the Neuilly bridge, but sitting safely at Versailles and bombarding on the poor mercenaries against their own class. 'Paris' is in the van, as of old, that she vindicates to herself the prerogative of martyrdom. There are thousands of workmen in Germany who are watching with painful anxiety the contest at Paris, on which the interests of labor are staked for this generation. For more truly is that noble city the heart of Europe in her present agony, than when the first BONAPARTE throned at the Tuileries, shook kingdoms with his rod."

THE CHURCH AND STATE QUESTION.

In a former letter I told you of the awkward consequences to the Church of England of the decision of the Privy Council on what is known as the Purchor case. The effect of the judgment was to strike directly at some of the most cherished observances of the High Church party, and while it granted the party to open defiance of the legal constitution of the Establishment, it also alarmed the Broad Church men, who had no sympathy with the Popish proclivities they condemned, but who felt that if the letter of the law were strictly enforced on the one hand it must be enforced on the other also, and then they would themselves be attacked. The High Church party got up a memorial in which they certainly did not mince their language as to the conduct of the Privy Council, and to this the Archbishop of Canterbury (at present in Italy for his health) has just replied in a characteristic letter. It is a very nimble tight-rope performance. His grace leans first to one side, then to the other; for a moment you think he is going over altogether, but he adroitly recovers his balance, and trips with gentle swaying motion along his rope. He insists upon the supreme authority of the Crown, as represented by the Privy Council, and the duty of obedience resting on all good citizens. The tribunal of the Church having delivered judgment, members of the Church have no alternative but to obey. So far, so good. But then the Archbishop suddenly changes his tone, and reminds the memorialists that "the whole practice of the Episcopate of England, in the administration of its duties, is averse to anything like tyrannical interference with individual liberty." The rule is to leave the clergy to act according to their own consciences, under direction of the rubrics—all which means that the Archbishop would be glad for the sake of peace if the High Church people would abandon their extravagances; but if they won't they won't, and the Bishops will not be so tyrannical as to enforce the law if they can possibly help it. The whole question is thus remitted to public clamor and contention, and though the inevitable schism may be for a little while postponed, it will be greatly embittered by this course of action when it does come. There is really nothing to be hoped from the paternal action of the Bishop. Rev. F. D. MAURICE, one of the leaders of the Broad Church, has some curious remarks on Bishops in a letter printed today. His "plebeian associations and habits" would, he says, have led him to expect the fatherly temper rather in men who have won their way to the Episcopal bench by their character and talents than in those whose chief claims are birth and family; but his experience is the other way. "The fact must be admitted, whether we can account for it or not, that there is a certain graciousness in some of those whom the Nonconformist would rank as mere Lords, which gives them an influence over men who are the least swayed by external accidents; a certain ungraciousness in some, with a very studious, oratorical and religious reputation, which makes it difficult to consult them as fathers—which makes one fancy, as they seem to fancy, that they are only born to execute decrees."

THE DEATH OF THE PRINCE.

The poor little Prince, son of the Prince of WALES, lived only a few hours, but his brief existence was not without incidents, for he was baptized with the names of ALEXANDER JOHN CHARLES ALBERT, buried with a full service, and little maidens in white to strew the pomp with primroses and other flowers of Spring; the Court has gone into mourning for him for ten days, and he is to have a tablet to his memory. I hear that the skirts of the Princess of WALES somehow caught fire when she was dressing for the banquet following the marriage of the Princess LOUISE, and that, though she sustained no very serious injury, the shock had an injurious effect upon her health.

THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION.

A few months since the Saturday Review caused some sensation by an article alleging an unhappy prevalence of drinking habits among ladies belonging to the upper ten thousand. There was a good deal of discussion on the subject, but the medical papers admitted that the evil was really genuine and serious, and that too large a quantity of stimulants was really consumed by fashionable women at lunch, dinner and ball-room suppers. The Saturday now turns its lantern on the mercantile community, whom it also accuses of indulging too freely in strong potations. "The amount of mischief," the writer says, "which is produced among all ranks of mercantile men by the growing custom of drinking frequent glasses of wine, and especially sherry, not at meals and along with or just after food, but tossed off at odd moments, as a mere 'nip,' either out of a private bottle or at one of the public bars, is producing incalculable mischief. Ask any doctor who has much to do with city men, and he will tell you of the terrible increase of paralysis among this class. A yearly list of the number of young men who either perish in this melancholy way, or are reduced to permanent imbecility, would startle those who have never had their attention called to it. Nor does the evil stop here. The tales of ruined character are more terrible even than those of ruined health. The recklessness with which business is carried on leads naturally to the desperate and unscrupulous measures which are resorted to in the attempt to avert or retrieve disaster. A cool head and careful prudence are essential to the maintenance of that secure credit which is the only basis of sound trade. The remedies for the present melancholy state of things must be sought in resolute abstinence from all stimulants during the hours of work, and in the endeavor to reduce as far as possible the worry and fatigue which usually attend the daily life of a man of business. The present movement for curtailing the hours of work is in every way a mistake. Instead of being shortened they should be lengthened, and city men, as they certainly will not go back to the old plan of living over their counting-houses, should at least try to establish themselves within walking distance of their place of business. What they imperatively require is more repose of mind and body, and less excitement." I can confirm this from my own observation. The amount of "liquoring up" which a number of city men go through in a day must be hurtful, and Liverpool is even worse than London.

An Appeal in Behalf of the Bank Clerks' Benevolent Association.

To Merchants, Bankers, Brokers and Others:

The Bank Clerks' Mutual Benefit Association of the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn was organized Feb. 10, 1859, for the purpose of making some provision at the death of a member for his widow and children, or, in the event of his not being married, for mother, sister, or others dependent on him for support; also, to relieve the necessities of the aged and disabled. There are over nine hundred members, who pay into the treasury the sum of fifty cents each per month, and a like amount as part of a general assessment on the death of an associate. The family or representatives of a member, at his death, receive, at the present rate of membership, over $950. Since the date of organization, twenty-two have died, and the sum of $20,490 50 has been paid to their families or heirs. It is expected there will be not less than ten deaths in each year. In several cases there was pressing need of the relief afforded by the Association; there will doubtless be many more of like character in the future. There can be no doubt that in the majority of cases the sum paid by the Society to the families of the deceased was an important addition to the amount saved by provident father, husband or brother. The Society has a fund contributed by banks and private individuals, amounting at present to $30,000, the interest only of which can be used in carrying out its objects. The fund is in the hands of three trustees, Wm. A. CAMP, Esq., manager of the Clearing-house, Chairman. To increase the permanent fund to an amount sufficient to provide for an increase in the number of deaths per annum, by reason of sickness, epidemic in character, or from other causes; to enlarge in time the benefit to the families of deceased members; to enable the Society to care for those worn out and disabled in the service; and to add another to the benevolent organizations in which our citizens take pride, the liberal-minded are invited to contribute. Should the response be general, the aggregate of donations will amount to a very handsome sum. Believing the officers of the Society, whose names will be found below, to be men of honor and integrity, giving their time and best efforts to this work of brotherly kindness without pecuniary reward, we are pleased to recommend this benevolent undertaking to the public:

W. E. Dodge, S. B. Chittenden, R. L. & A. Stuart, H. B. Clafin & Co., Cammann & Co., A. Low, Isaac H. Bailey & Son, Dodge, Jr., Arthur Leary, Henry C. Bowen, Wm. A. Kobbé, Haddon & Co., Jas. A. Roosevelt, Vermilye & Co., Jay Cooke & Co., Wm. M. Parks, Henry Clews, George Opdyke, Peter Cooper, Daniel F. Tiemann, Samuel Hallenbeck, Wm. Henry Gunther, R. Leyllard & Co., Jackson S. Schultz, Paton & Co., Abraham E. Wagner.

The following are the officers of the Association: President—J. C. Parsons, Chemical National Bank; Vice-President—M. F. Reading, National Mechanics' Banking Association; Corresponding Secretary—Wm. A. Nash, Corn Exchange Bank; Recording Secretary—C. H. Dunmore, Merchants' Exchange National Bank; Treasurer—T. L. Raymond, North River Bank.

PERSONAL, POLITICAL, AND GENERAL.

A bill to make the State Treasurer elective has passed the Pennsylvania Senate.

Major-Gen. JOHN G. PARKE will be present at the reunion in Boston, in May, of the Ninth Army Corps, which at one time he commanded.

President GRANT was formally invited to visit Louisville, on his return from St. Louis, but his engagements in Washington prevented his acceptance.

A discharged servant-girl set the house of Mayor MORRIS, of Nashville, Tenn., on fire on Saturday night last, and he and his family narrowly escaped suffocation.

The Pennsylvania Democratic State Convention is to be held in Harrisburg on the 24th of May. The Republican Convention is to be held in the same city one week earlier.

A Virginia youth, delightedly watching the performances at a circus, had one of his eyes put out by a small stone thrown from the hoof of a horse.

San Francisco papers record a marked change of the barometer there on the 17th and 18th inst. From 6 A. M., on the 17th, until 6 P. M., on the 18th, it rose from 29.60 to 30.45.

Ex-President ANDREW JOHNSON has accepted an invitation to deliver an address on mechanical skill and industry at a mechanics' fair in Nashville, Tenn., on Saturday, May 27.

JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE was elected a delegate to the Kentucky Democratic State Convention, but declined to serve, as he is still unwilling to re-enter the arena of political strife.

The reversal of the former opinion of the Supreme Court upon the constitutionality of the Legal-tender act, is approved by the Boston Transcript, which says that patriotism and common sense have at last triumphed.

The Boston Transcript apparently has not much sympathy for two elderly ladies in that city who were greatly disappointed at not getting their soda free in an apothecary-store because they were "helping at the French Fair."

Only about twenty persons have signed the petition circulated in Binghamton for the commutation of BULLOFF's sentence to imprisonment for life, and they ask it only because they are opposed to capital punishment in all cases.

Canadian papers report dust in the chief cities of the Dominion—Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, London, Hamilton, and the rest—there are no desirable dwelling-houses vacant, although new buildings are continually going up, and that the demand for labor is in excess of the supply.

Describing the injurious effects of the frost in Indiana on Saturday night last, the Indianapolis Journal says: "We have examined the grapes, plums, pears, peaches, cherries and strawberries, and find them nearly all killed. In some sheltered places, where the vines were protected by buildings, a few grapes escaped, but the destruction is so general that what is left hardly deserves mention."

The Macon (Ga.) Telegraph & Messenger wants it made lively for those seventeen Democratic Congressmen who were absent from their seats when the final vote on the Ku-Klux bill was passed. It abuses them roundly, and exclaims: "Fancy Toombs, or Stephens, or Cobb, or Jackson, or Johnson, or Colquitt, or Hardeman coming home to attend to 'private business' when a measure of such moment as this Ku-Klux bill was before Congress!" How do the seventeen like the company in which they are mentioned?

The list of living writers who are natives of Essex County, Massachusetts, includes the names of Caleb Cushing, J. G. Whittier, Ex-President Leonard Woods, Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Adams, Rev. Dr. Stephen H. Tyng, Prof. Benjamin Pierce, Rev. Dr. Andrew P. Peabody, Rev. Dr. Gardiner Spring, Bishop Thomas M. Clark, Geo. Lunt, William Lloyd Garrison, Mrs. Horace Mann, William W. Story, Epes Sargent, Rev. Charles T. Brooks, Lydia L. A. Very, Edwin P. Whipple, R. S. Spofford, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Robert S. Rantoul, Lucy Larcom and Gail Hamilton.

Judge URSON, of Michigan, last week ruled that a divorce once granted in Indiana is binding in Michigan, however it may have been procured. The question came up in the trial of a case in which the defendant, as alleged, abandoned his wife in this State, went directly to Michigan, and while there obtained a divorce in Indiana, his wife, who still remained here, having no personal notice of the suit. Subsequently he married a woman in Michigan, and his first wife instituted a suit against him, with the result mentioned.

Mrs. LAURA PARSONS has sued the City of Cleveland, Ohio, for $139 33, this being one-third of the money collected in fines imposed upon gamblers against whom she had given information. Late one night last October she informed the Police of the city that her husband was then at a certain gambling-house, and that he had lost $1,400 there within ten days. The Police made a descent the next night and arrested all present, and the city authorities now dispute her claim, on the ground that the Police were aware of the existence of this gambling-house, and that they could have made all the arrests at any time, without any information from her.

An New-York commercial agent was leaning against a desk in a hotel in Concord, N. H., on Monday evening, a white flame suddenly burst from his vest pocket, which contained only a gold pen and its holder and two ten-cent scrips. Before he could extinguish it, he was quite severely burned. On investigation, the penholder was found completely melted and flattened out, as if rolled when very hot. It was a pocket gold pen, with gold butt and black handle, and had been used for some time daily. He thinks that some adhesive filling of an explosive nature had been used in constructing the holder, and that in leaning over the desk the pressure had ignited it.

How unscrupulous and untrustworthy the Albany Argus is, the Brooklyn Eagle points out when it says that the recklessness of political assertion which impairs the force of legitimate political criticism is illustrated by a statement published by it in relation to President GRANT. The Eagle says: "Evidence sufficient to authorize the statement would be sufficient to satisfy the public of its truth and to consign the President to hopeless infamy. If there is no such evidence the publication is itself infamous. It is conscienceless partisan assertions such as this that shake the popular faith in all political assertions, and reduce all political criticism, in the public judgment, to the level of electioneering falsehoods and libels."

The Pittsburg Chronicle says that on Wednesday morning a letter was received at the office of the Mayor of that city from the authorities of Gettysburg, Penn., renewing the request that a detective be sent there to see whether a prisoner in their hands was really FORRESTER, the alleged murderer of Mr. NATHAN. The Chronicle says the letter contained a description of the prisoner, which is declared by those at the Mayor's office, who have abundant means of knowing, to answer that of FORRESTER in every detail. It quietly expresses a hope that the full earnestness of the Gettysburg authorities in the matter is not indicated by the fact that they made the Mayor pay the charges on the telegram sent on the day previous.

THE BUILDING RECORD.

Proposed New Buildings.

The following is the list of new buildings proposed for erection in this City since the last report and for the week ending Thursday, April 27, 1871. The record is an official one from plans filed at the office of JAMES M. MAGORGAN, Superintendent of the Department of Buildings:

WARNING TO POLICY DEALERS.

A Badgerized Player Prosecuting the Proprietor of a Policy Office—The Accused Goes to the Penitentiary—Sentenced on the Same by Justice Dowling.

At the Court of Special Sessions, yesterday, Justices DOWLING and SHANDLEY presiding, some insight into the doings of the Centre-street policy system was offered in the case of PETER MCINTYRE, who was charged by THOMAS KING, of No. 133 Greene street, with refusing to pay a prize, known to the initiated as a "nine," which was drawn by the latter. The complainant testified that he paid 50 as the policy office of the accused for a "combination," so called, which, if drawn, entitled him to $600. The nine numbers forming the combination came out, and he then applied to MCINTYRE for his prize-money, which was refused. He sued on the ground that the play was a beat. In reply to the question why he had deposited his money, KING said that he expected to win something. If enough numbers of those he had selected were drawn to constitute a "gig," he would get $27 65, and if the whole nine came out he would get $600, according to the rules of policy. He assumed, when he went to make inquiries about the case, was being asked by the Court if he had any questions to asked KING, replied, "Questions, certainly not; you can do nothing." JOHN MCINTYRE, a brother of the accused, offered his testimony, however, which was to the effect that KING while in the employ of PETER MCINTYRE had obtained him from time to time. He also described the complainant as a "beat of the first water," and as a person who had been a policy-dealer himself.

The prisoner made no attempt to deny the charge of withholding the prize, and sentence was accordingly imposed in the case.

Justice DOWLING—Do you admit the statement made. On this the Court finds you guilty. You can offer no defense, because you have nothing tangible upon which to base it. It is one of the most degrading and mean institutions that I know. You care not by what means your name is had; but I am fully aware that in nine cases out of ten, poor people are imposed upon, when an order to handle something, will induce their clothing under the infatuation that they will be certain to win something. They little know how poor their chances are. Seventy-eight numbers are put in to be drawn for, but only certain of the numbers—or combinations—fall to the lot of those who play, the remaining seventy-seven being in favor of the man behind the counter, and he rarely fails to secure the prize. Myself and associate are determined to break up this villainy, and we shall not cease our endeavors until we have successfully relieved the community from this temptation to commit crime in the attempt to win money without the sweat. You seem defiant and rather delight in what you consider a safe position. To teach you and your brother policy-dealers a lesson, instead of inflicting a fine of $500, I think the public will be better vindicated by sending you to the Penitentiary for one month.

The Grant Monument Slow Work—The Subscription Deferred Till June.

There has been a general impression that the erection of a monument to Prof. MORSE in Central Park would be duly celebrated some time in the present month, and that among the features of the occasion there would be a gathering in the Park and a reception in the Academy of Music. Unexpectedly the preparations for the celebration and the work itself have been delayed. The electricians of the United States subscribed about $20,000 toward paying for the monument and defraying the attendant expenses, and a number of prominent merchants, on being called upon, gave over $1,000 each. Mr. HENRY G. STEBBINS, the treasurer, worked hard to raise the requisite money, but not having consulted the Board of Park Commissioners before beginning his efforts he incurred the displeasure of those gentlemen. They displayed no interest in his exertions, and that is, perhaps, one reason why at the present moment only the stone foundation of the monument has been laid. The phenomenal fact is the entrance to the Casino and there the granite blocks, which are to be used for the pedestal, have been deposited. The work, according to Judge HILTON, will not be sufficiently advanced for the celebration to take place until some day next June.

Opening of the Proposals for Indian Goods.

The sealed proposals to the Board of Indian Commissioners for furnishing blankets, clothing, hardware and stoves to the Indians were opened yesterday afternoon, at the office of the Board, in Dutch-street. This was the first occasion on which both the bids and samples have been received in New-York, and the expediency of the change was made evident. The proposals opened yesterday were from almost every section of the country, including one offer of blankets amounting to over $500,000, from JOHN DOUGLAS, of Huntingdon, and another of the same with clothing, amounting to $250,000, from H. B. CLAFLIN & Co.

The opening of the proposals by Col. E. S. PARKER occupied four hours and a half, after which the Commissioners adjourned further proceedings until to-day. Among the Commissioners present were GEO. H. STUART, of Philadelphia; JOHN D. LANG, of Maine; ROBERT CAMPBELL, of St. Louis; EDWARD S. TOBEY, of Boston, and VINCENT COLLYER, of New-York.

The Election of Professor Snodgrass—Indignant Remonstrance Against the New Bill of Lading.

Yesterday at noon a meeting of the grain-and shippers of this City was held at the rooms of the Produce Exchange to remonstrate against the conditions imposed upon them by the new bill of lading adopted by the ship-owners. The meeting was called to order by Mr. ARCHIBALD BAXTER, who was made Chairman. The following resolutions, after discussion, in which Messrs. BAXTER, JOHN M. WEBB, BRAND, MONTGOMERY and ERASTUS C. KNIGHT took part, were adopted:

Whereas, The action of the various commercial associations of this City, in relation to the recently changed form of the "Bill of Lading," which has come in use to a great number of ports and to which we have no objection, ignores the rights and interests of the shippers and, in exchange for the privilege of a discharge from liability as a forwarder, imposes upon them the responsibility of an insurer; and

Whereas, Such responsibility can be assumed by the shippers only at a ruinous rate of insurance; and

Whereas, The Produce Exchange, by its organization and by the character of its membership, is an auxiliary committee of the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Underwriters and all the other commercial associations of this City, which are united in the effort to secure the passage of such legislation as will protect the commerce of the State and City from the exactions of the railroad corporations, and which has been successful in securing the passage of the Act of 1870, which reduces the charges for the transportation of grain from the West to the seaboard more than 2 cents per bushel, and which will secure to the shippers of grain from the West to the seaboard a saving of more than $2,000,000 less than the corresponding period last year.

Resolved, That in thus acting without previous consultation with or notice to the shippers of produce from New-York to Liverpool, against whom the bills of lading have been issued, with a view to discontinuance, and that a bill of lading, being a contract between two parties, the alteration of one to impose their rules upon the other without previous consent is arbitrary and unjustifiable.

Resolved, That other grounds of complaint against the bills of lading have been existing, instrumental in causing the present movement.

Resolved, That the committee be instructed to take the best legal advice as to the rights of shippers in the premises, and to draw up a general protest, under which shippers may execute the rules now attempted to be imposed upon them.

In accordance with the resolutions, the following Committee was appointed: Messrs. ROBERT BOOTH, JOHN M. WEBB, DAVID STEWART, J. BRAND, and the Chairman Mr. BAXTER. The meeting then adjourned.

City Incorporations.

The City Mission held its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday evening in the Thirteenth-street Presbyterian Church. Several of the missionaries read statements of their experience and observations in their efforts at reclaiming and saving the wandering and the lost. From the statement of the Secretary we obtain the following figures:

There are 33 missionaries, male and female, now actively employed, who made, during the last month, 1,185 visits; of these 1,185 visits, 1,000 were to families, 185 were to children in daily-school session, 12 to which were held the missions, 6 to various meetings, 2 to the sick poor, and there are 4 Mission Schools having an aggregate membership and daily attendance of 1,000. There are 1,200 children in daily and Sunday-schools, and 1,200 temperance societies, prayer-meetings, with about 4,000 pledged members enrolled. The Helping Hand Association, supported entirely by an auxiliary committee of Ladies, has distributed during the month of March 1,000 articles of clothing, and 2,000 articles of bedding, etc., which were distributed to the needy and destitute. The Committee on Employment, which has been organized to find work for persons, male and female, who are out of employment, and who are destitute of the means of support, have found employment for 50 persons during the month, and have distributed 1,000 circulars to employers, asking them to employ the poor. The Committee on Clothing, which has been organized to collect and distribute clothing to the poor, has received 1,000 articles of clothing, and distributed 1,000 articles. The Committee on Sewing, which has been organized to employ poor women in sewing, has given employment to 50 persons during the month, and has paid out $1,000 less than the corresponding period last year.

The Last of the Board of Education—Appointment of Teachers.

The New-York Board of Education met at 4 P. M. yesterday, President SMITH in the chair.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

The situation in France remains unchanged. Prince BISMARCK has directed Gen. FABRICE, at Paris, to inform the Commune that if any mishap should occur to the Archbishop, the Prussians would probably interfere. The southern forts are badly damaged. Versaillist projectiles fall inside the ramparts of the city, and many people were killed and wounded. The Communists will blow up the forts if it is should be necessary. The Communes claim several victories. The Communal Council holds its sittings with closed doors. The Commune suffers for lack of money and men, and the National Guards openly disobey its orders. The last stand will be made in the Rue de Rivoli and Rue de Castiglione, in the immediate vicinity of the Place Vendome. Fort Mont Valerien is silent. It is now admitted that the Versailles Government is unable to pay to the Germans the first installment of indemnity, long since due. Some important movements have been executed north of Paris, while the situation of the insurgents south of Paris is said to be good. There was some fighting at Asnieres on Wednesday. The Prussians have ordered the arrest of the curé of the Church of St. Denis. The Rothschild Purse was won by Baron ROTHSCHILD'S filly, Hemsek.

GENERAL.

The Joint High Commission have taken a recess till next Wednesday, and it is presumed that the general principles of a settlement have been agreed upon, though the plan has not yet acquired form. The fisheries, the navigation of the canals and the River St. Lawrence have probably been considered as separate questions, but the details have not been arranged. These subjects will be embraced in one treaty to be submitted to the Senate.

Yesterday morning a train from Plainfield, N. J., for New-York, struck one of BARNUM'S circus wagons, near Cranford, killing three men outright and dangerously injuring two others, while a sixth was slightly injured. All belonged to the circus. The wagon was totally demolished. Two mules were carried over two hundred feet and left dead in a heap. The driver's body was found seventy-five yards from the crossing.

Mrs. FAIR, convicted of the murder of Col. CRITTENDEN, will not be sentenced until the 29th of May. Her counsel desired a month's time to prepare an application for a new trial. They HAVING reserved about forty exceptions to the rulings of the Court.

The German Peace celebration in Philadelphia is fixed for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 14, 15 and 16. Sunday is to be devoted to religious services in the churches, and Monday to a grand parade, all the German societies taking part.

The Supreme Court of South Carolina has lately unanimously decided in favor of the validity of contracts in which slaves were the consideration.

Two sisters named HOWMAN, aged respectively eighty-seven and seventy-one, died recently at Germantown. The elder sister died first, and the other, overpowered with grief, survived her only four hours.

The wreck of the revenue cutter Miami, which was driven ashore last Winter, near Point Penn, has been sold at auction for $2,000. She was originally built as a pleasure yacht for Lord PALMERSTON, but was sold to the Government.

Judge BLATCHFORD has granted the motion for an order requiring JAY GOULD to show cause why he should not produce the books and convertible bonds he has been ordered to produce by Commissioner WEBB. Unless a return to this order satisfactory to the counsel of the [illegible] stockholders is made, a motion will be made and argued to punish JAY GOULD for contempt of Court.

O'BALDWIN, the pugilist, having served his sentence in jail at Lawrence, Mass., was liberated yesterday. He was conveyed from the jail in a hack, followed by an admiring crowd. His friends will give him a benefit at the Olympic Theatre, in Boston.

LUCIEN BEARD, a notorious home thief, with ALFRED HASEL and J. W. WATSON, the men from North Carolina held by the United States authorities for passing counterfeit money, escaped from the Washington Jail yesterday morning.

Capt. NICHOLS, United States Navy, has been ordered to duty as a member of the Board, of which Capt. PATTERSON is President; Lieut. G. W. FARRENHOLT, ordered to the Norfolk Navy-yard; Lieut. G. W. DELONG to the New-York Navy-Yard.

An extensive forgery has been perpetrated in Cleveland, Ohio, and the culprit arrested.

M. M. KENNEDY, a farmer of Solon Township, Ohio, was killed by his son, yesterday, while quarreling over property. The son claims to have acted in self-defense.

A fight took place on Wednesday between negroes of Robeson County, North Carolina, and a party of citizens under the Sheriff, in which two of the Sheriff's posse were killed and one severely wounded.

In the Washington Criminal Court, H. BOLSTER, tried for the killing of JOSEPH JAMES, a gambler, in February last, was convicted yesterday of murder in the first degree.

The Jersey City Board of Finance and Taxation, yesterday, rectified the sale of $600,000 more of city bonds at par and interest.

Wall and Broad streets were much exercised today in consequence of the reaction in the stock market. Several of the favorite stocks declined from four to five per cent.

The Brooklyn ship-yards are becoming more busy of late, as several steam-boats are being repaired, or new ones under progress of construction.

What is Meant by "Republican Unity."

We published yesterday an admirable speech of Senator FENTON'S. It had the merit of brevity—no slight merit in this long-winded age—and it expressed sentiments which we are quite sure everybody must highly commend. They could not fail to restore something like harmony to the action of the party in this State if they were only put into practice—but there, we fear, is the difficulty. Senator FENTON lays great stress on the necessity of keeping the Republican Party in power. "To imperil its prospects," he says, "to incur the risk of defeat, is to assume an appalling responsibility." We are rejoiced to find that Senator FENTON realizes that fact. It proves that he cannot possibly have any sympathy with the "Tammany Republicans," who are laboring with might and main to destroy the true party, who were the means of our losing the election last Fall, and many of whom are notoriously paid by the Ring to do the Ring's work. With this section of the party, Senator FENTON'S name has often been associated. It has even been alleged that he was the means of electing a Tammany Senator from Chautauqua and Cattaraugus Counties, in the person of LORENZO MORRIS. Gov. FENTON executed a "bolt" in that election—it was in '67—and Tammany profited thereby. Last Fall a Democratic Congressman was nearly returned from the Thirty-first Congressional District. At this very moment, Senator FENTON'S friends in this City are doing all they can to help TWEED and his cronies, and paralyze the Republicans. Now, these are facts, deny them who may,—but we do not say that they prove anything against Senator FENTON. They are only strange coincidences, and Mr. FENTON is possibly merely the victim of circumstances.

Now let us see what else Senator FENTON talked about in his speech. After dwelling upon the importance of securing the triumph of the Republican Party, he said: "Thus believing, I shall make no warfare upon others." That is a very satisfactory promise—now, perhaps Senator FENTON will be able to persuade his bosom friends to refrain from likening his colleague to a "jackass." That kind of work is not calculated to promote good feeling. "For this reason," Senator FENTON went on, "I have deplored the cause pursued in reference to the political affairs in our own State." What course? The other day Mr. GREELEY declined to assist in the work of reorganizing the party, because sufficient "forbearance and conciliation" had not "been evinced by the appointing power at Washington." It cannot be doubted that Senator FENTON and Mr. GREELEY referred to the same grievance—the Custom-house grievance. Is it, then, after all, a mere question of distribution of offices which decides the conduct of such a man as Senator FENTON? Why should the Senator go about shaking his head, and "deploring the course which has been pursued?" What has the President done beyond using the power vested in him by the Constitution? "He shall nominate, and by and with the advice of the Senate shall appoint, * * * all other officers of the United States whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for." The Collector of the Port of New-York is one of the officers thus designated. The Constitution does not say that a Senator of New-York shall "nominate and appoint"—it selects the President for that purpose. Then what has the President done that he should be reproached thus incessantly? Why shed so many tears over his "course?" He made Mr. MURPHY Collector. Well, we said what we had to say about that at the time. But in justice to Mr. MURPHY, we are bound to add now that the Secretary of the Treasury regards him as a most competent business man, and, after all, we must remember that the Custom-house is a place of business. The receipts of the Custom-house during the past six months of Mr. MURPHY'S rule have exceeded by about nine millions the receipts of similar periods heretofore. This looks as if, at any rate, he understood his practical work, and he is entitled to this acknowledgment from us, since we were not over friendly to his appointment.

We disclaim all desire to take part in any warfare of cliques—there has been too much of that kind of fighting already. But when Senator FENTON protests that he has done nothing to divide the party, that he has made war on no man, and so forth, it is impossible to suppose that he wishes us to accept his words without some limitation or reserve. We earnestly hope that he will keep his promise, and hereafter refuse "any countenance to internal warfare." Let him join heartily in the endeavor to render the party strong and united, and to overthrow the infamous Tammany gang which has destroyed popular government in this City, and threatens to overwhelm the whole country with corruption. That is all we ask of any Republican leader at the present moment, and those who say we have no right to ask it, had better join with the Tammany conspirators in the effort to gag or suppress newspapers altogether.

The Break-Down of Fraud in Connecticut.

The Democracy, regardless of the law and facts, are endeavoring to make out that JAMES E. ENGLISH is legally chosen Governor of Connecticut. It appears that they will, if the General Assembly gives the certificate to Gov. JEWELL, denounce the action as "fraudulent." "Hitherto," says a Democratic paper, "it has been the custom to accept the count of the official canvassers, without going behind their returns." Circumstances may arise which render it unsafe to adhere to this custom, and the recent election in Connecticut presented an example of such circumstances. In the town of Enfield there is a false count of twenty-five votes, and in the Fourth Ward of New-Haven, the vote of ENGLISH is one hundred in excess of the poll. The Moderator of the town of Enfield filed, with the return of the vote of the town, a protest in writing against the correctness of the count. The Moderator of the Fourth Ward of New-Haven has certified to errors in the return. Surely, then, it is the imperative duty of the General Assembly to ascertain what errors were really made by the canvassers in counting the votes. Or are we to have it recognized by law and custom that the results of ballot-box stuffing are everywhere to be binding in elections?

The Constitution of Connecticut provides that the Assembly shall, after an examination of the returns, declare which candidate they find to be legally chosen, and give him notice accordingly. In the present instance, how is the correctness of the returns from the town of Enfield and the Fourth Ward of New-Haven to be determined except by a recount? The returns from these two districts are accompanied by evidence of fraud. This evidence the Assembly is, by the express terms of the Constitution, bound to consider. An examination can only be refused in direct violation of the law. If the returns are always to be accepted as correct, without examination, why was it made the duty of the Assembly to examine them? The law of Connecticut empowers the Assembly, not the canvassers, to correct the returns.

The election in Connecticut is of too recent occurrence for the circumstances attending it to have passed out of the public mind. Tammany resolved to buy Connecticut. The sale was negotiated at Albany between Boss TWEED and JAMES E. ENGLISH. The telegrams exchanged between the "high contracting parties," on the eve of election, would be sufficient evidence of the sale, even if there were no other. On the day of election the bullies of Tammany were in attendance at the polls, and New-Haven was filled with the roughest repeaters of the "Ring." Though assisted by the frauds and corruption of Tammany, Gov. ENGLISH could not deliver the article purchased. Having failed at the polls, an impudent attempt is now being made by the Democratic Press to browbeat the Assembly into accepting the returns of the canvassers as unquestionable. All that Republicans ask is that there shall be a scrutiny of them, as the Constitution provides, in order that the certificates of the Moderators of the Fourth Ward of New-Haven and Enfield may be found, and the one hundred and twenty-five fraudulent votes cast for JAMES E. ENGLISH discovered. In the State of New-York free government by the people is at an end. Four men have been given more than kingly power over the revenue and wealth of the City. This power has been obtained by wholesale corruption, and an unparalleled system of fraud. The corruption which was at one time confined to the City of New-York is spreading to the other States; the rural districts are becoming familiar with it, and now an attempt is made to seize Connecticut by mob force. But the Tammany gang will find that the people of other States have some spirit still left in them. They are Americans, not slaves. The returns are to be examined on Wednesday next, by the Assembly, and the person legally chosen, who in this instance is MARSHALL JEWELL, will be duly declared Governor of Connecticut.

Rudeness on Street-Cars.

Any one accustomed to travel at night in our street cars will be able to appreciate how completely the respectable inhabitants of this community are at the mercy of our City rowdies. Their extensive control over City Boards and local Courts lends to our collective mass of ruffianism a social importance, and a degree of immunity from ordinary restraint, unexampled in any great city of the world. Any one whom a drunken or quarrelsome rough may single out for insult is almost entirely without a remedy. He may be riding in a car filled with passengers, nearly all of whom are respectable citizens, but in the event of his being made the target of brutal insolence, his peaceably-disposed fellow-passengers will, in nine cases out of ten, keep their sentiments to themselves, and represent the cause of order by a masterly inactivity. Nobody knows whether the foul-mouthed aggressor may not be an Alderman or part-proprietor of some local Justice. He might have the ear of the Governor, or might be one of the shoulder-hitters who bask in the smiles of TWEED. To forcibly eject such a fellow, in the interests of decency and order, might somehow turn out to be a State-Prison offense, while to remonstrate with him might probably be the signal for a little promiscuous shooting, for which he would not unlikely go unpunished. In such a case, therefore, people who value their lives and their liberty, cautiously let the insolent rowdy alone, and congratulate themselves that they have not happened to be the recipient of his attentions. As for the drivers and conductors of street-cars, we have yet to hear of one who will turn a passenger out for any reason short of being unable to pay his fare. He may be disgustingly drunk, filthy in speech, or violent in conduct, but the Company's servants, having but a low idea at any time of the decencies proper to a public conveyance, may probably have a certain sympathy with the offender, and will certainly not, unless in very exceptional cases, have him put out or arrested.

A melancholy illustration of how much a ruffian may dare and do with the tolerance of on-lookers was given on Tuesday night. Mr. AVERY D. PUTNAM was a passenger in a Broadway car, and was accompanied by two ladies. He occupied a seat near the door opening on the front platform. Beside the driver stood a man named FOSTER, said to be an ex-conductor of the Broadway and Seventh-avenue line. This fellow took it into his head to exercise the natural right of a New-York rough to insult a lady. He opened the door several times, and by look and action behaved insolently toward the younger of Mr. PUTNAM'S female companions. A quiet remonstrance from the gentleman appears to have been regarded by the rowdy as a perfectly unwarranted interference with his special prerogatives. Awaiting the time when Mr. PUTNAM and his companions alighted, FOSTER seized the hook of the apparently sympathetic driver, and stepping from the car, delivered his victim a blow on the head which fractured the skull, and will probably result fatally. A more atrocious outrage it would be impossible to imagine, and its significance lies in the fact that nobody who has any experience of night-cars will be greatly astonished at it. People will say that the safest rule in such cases is not to notice the affront, but quietly to get out of harm's way by alighting. But will they at the same time reflect how utterly degrading to the inhabitants of the greatest City of the greatest of free people is the confession involved here? Our roughs have got the upper hand of us, and we give a sneaking indorsement to their rule. Theirs is the unbridled license, and ours the quaking submission. Theirs is the power to command Executive pardons, pigeon-holed indictments, and reverence from the Police. Ours are the taxes that maintain ruffianism in riotous and insolent ease, and ours are the votes they are hired to render worthless.

The morbidly cautious passengers of a street-car are but a type of the society to which they belong. We are sacrificing manhood, fair play, chivalry, everything that is worth being proud of, from a slavish fear of the brags of our populace who have come to the surface. How inseparable are political misrule and social license, is brought home to every man's understanding by an incident like the present. If our ruffians were not pampered, flattered, and paid by the knavish Ring that misgoverns us, they would be far less bold and infinitely less dangerous. There is no perceptible dividing line between the men who, if the law did its duty, would be in the State Prison and the men who control both the prevention and the punishment of crime. Their interests are perfectly identical, and those who believe in the stability of the one will be likely to fear to dispute the humanities of the other. If the public who ride in street-cars would respect themselves a little more, and the class of rowdies a little less, we should soon see a marked reform in the insolent demeanor of these worthies, and perhaps a corresponding regard to decency in their political patrons. It will be but a melancholy consolation to the relatives of Mr. PUTNAM to be told that he has fallen a victim to such brutal passion as grows up side by side with political depravity, and to whose excesses we are all equally liable. The present offense is so monstrous that it cannot fail to excite a universal sentiment of public indignation. It may thus help to direct attention to the primary causes that render such an act possible. It will, without doubt, incite a general demand for the better regulation of our street-cars and a more careful choice of the men to whom they are intrusted. Mr. PUTNAM'S unprovoked and brutal murder may thus, by the startling disclosure it affords of the need for reform, be the means of producing a partial remedy for similar outrages. For his sorrowing friends every respectable inhabitant of this community will have but one sentiment of heartfelt sympathy, and for his dastardly assailant but one indignant demand for the full measure of justice.

The "Tribune" on Toleration.

The Tribune, whose fairness toward public men and all its contemporaries must be well known, since it constantly boasts of it, represents us as asserting that "all the Republicans need do" to recover their strength in the State is "to go in strong for boundless lager." We shall leave our readers to decide how far this is a just version of the articles which have recently appeared in our columns on political affairs. Truth is great, and the Tribune, like GEORGE WASHINGTON, could not possibly tell a lie. If we really had used the argument which the Tribune is kind enough to put into our mouths, it would certainly not be much more absurd than the great and memorable ideas of "redeeming" the Irish race by means of the Shillyegammon fund; of restoring harmony to the South by sending JEFF. DAVIS back to the Senate; of assisting commerce by repudiating the Legal-tender act; and of making all mankind moral by compelling the Germans to shut up their lager-beer gardens, and enjoy no other diversion than that which they could derive from reading that curiosity in literature entitled, What I Know About Farming. These are "ideas" of which any man might well be proud.

The Tribune, which would not misrepresent any public man or public journal for all the world, or call anybody bad names, or do anything wicked, happens just now to be in one of its tolerant moods, and declares that it would allow all men the right to hold their own opinions—which is uncommonly handsome on its part, and shows a great concession to popular prejudices. The great law-giver—for the Tribune writes on these themes as if another Moses had been commissioned to proclaim twelve brand-new commandments, all ticketed off in Roman numerals—is further graciously pleased to observe: "It (the Tribune) insists on the perfect right of each Republican to be a Free Trader or a Protectionist, exactly as his own understanding and judgment shall dictate." Precisely so—and the Tribune further "insists" on the right of calling "each Republican" who takes the liberty of following his "own understanding and judgment" a "liar," or a "fool," or a "villain," and proclaiming to the public that he has been bought with "British gold." That is the Tribune's idea of freedom of opinion, when it reduces its system to practice. It wants the widest possible latitude for itself, and takes it; but it would knock down anybody who dared to claim the same liberty. In fact, it is of the same tolerant school as Lodowick Muggleton, the mad tailor, who used to go about denouncing eternal torments against all who refused to believe that the Supreme Being was just six feet high, and that the sun was only four miles from the earth. There are a good many other points in common between the Tribune and Lodowick Muggleton.

A Rival to Maddy.

In a democratic community like ours, where the highest station is potentially within the reach of the obscurest citizen, pre-eminence in any pursuit is maintained only at the price of unceasing effort and the risk of constant rivalry. For example, in those agreeable accomplishments which, in our City, so adorn and elevate public life, and are the surest helps to civic greatness, Mr. VARLEY has long been thought to excel. But lately there has come into prominence a new figure, who bids fair to be a formidable rival, if he does not rob the Blacksmith of his fairest laurels. Mr. HILL, or "Cooley Keys," (for, as is the custom of these warriors, he too has a nom de guerre,) has hitherto been less known to fame than to the Police. But real talent, joined to ambition, cannot long remain buried, and Mr. HILL has, from time to time of late, given proof of his capacity for political preferment by a series of very striking exploits. Not the least meritorious of these, was the original notion of getting himself robbed of large amounts of money which existed only in his affluent imagination. This was a stroke of financial dexterity worthy of the great FISK himself. But his crowning achievement quite throws this in the shade, and develops a specialty in ruffianism which eclipses Reddy, and ought to win for its author high future distinction in the realms of TWEED.

This happy device consists in beating women of that unfortunate class which society has put beyond the pale of its recognition and protection. The discretion thus shown in the choice of subjects for the exercise of his art is not less admirable than the neatness of his execution. Mr. HILL first knocks the victim down with a chair, and then beats her head into a jelly with champagne bottles. After that he kicks her a little, and perhaps jumps on her once or twice, but, with inimitable precision, pauses just this side of total extinction. The Police opportunely arriving when the performance is over, he gives himself up with great magnanimity, is respectfully escorted to jail, and the next morning released by a friendly Magistrate on his own or some equally valuable recognizance.

It is proper to remark that in this heroic diversion Mr. HILL is accompanied by a friend and helper. But as this person is plainly a vulgar cut-throat of the ordinary type, who owes his inspiration to a more commanding genius, we do not deem him worthy of notice in this chronicle. The question that now agitates us is, why ability so eminent and courage so indomitable are not working in their proper sphere. Why is he dependent on the precarious chances of "skin" faro for his noble livelihood? Why is he not an Assistant Alderman or a member of Assembly at least? Or, still better, why does he not enlist in the aid of the oppressed and suffering Southern Democracy his notable knack for butchering women? As a leader of Kuklux, he might achieve enduring and appropriate infamy; as an addition to our already sufficiently large and varied assortment of Metropolitan villainy, he is an embarrassing superfluity. Perhaps, however, Mr. VARLEY will kindly shoot him? And if, at the same time, Mr. HILL would be good enough to shoot Mr. VARLEY,—the prospect is almost too enchanting.

Stimulants to Emigration.

While it is true that, in one sense, our great Pacific Railways are strictly individual or corporate enterprises, it should not be forgotten that they are also something more. The prodigious land grants made to these Companies have been frequently criticised, but they certainly were not made without consideration. The grants were made by the nation in its collective capacity on exactly the same principle that an individual landholder gives away or sells, on very easy terms, alternate lots of his estate. In a word, these iron roads, cutting through the entire continent, vastly increase in value the national landed property; and the whole country is necessarily made richer by the process.

But a year or two ago, going to the "Far West" was a protracted and weary journey. Old World emigrants hesitated long and anxiously before undertaking it. Numbers scarcely to be estimated were doubtless prevented, by the unknown risks and disagreeables of getting thither, from ever starting for the West at all. When facilities for transportation are notoriously easy, the difficulties of colonizing a new territory are immeasurably diminished. The humblest peasant knows that if he can get swiftly to a place, the products of the soil, the fruits of his industry, can be brought swiftly from it. This knowledge has already given an impetus to emigration. But we see now only the beginning of it. Years ago people were several days in reaching New-York from Boston by stage-coach. When the railways and steam-boats were first established, travel between these points was, of course, greatly increased. But the increase of the first few years was as a mill stream to Niagara compared with what came after. The late European war gave a serious check to emigration. Nothing is more certain, however, than that this will prove but temporary. There has been, as it were, a dam keeping back the waters for a space, while, simultaneously, they have continued to rise. Once swept away, the rush will be far greater for the temporary obstruction.

Unforeseen European complications may, it is true, again arise to interfere with such a movement. The probabilities, notwithstanding, are against such a hypothesis. Damages like those of the Franco-Prussian war are not repaired in a day, and the most powerful man, after tremendous exertions, must sleep. If, as seems reasonable, a political lethargy spreads for a season, over Europe, there will almost to a certainty ensue an exodus for our own shores unparalleled before. It is manifestly to our interest to encourage this. Practicable methods for encouragement are numerous, and they are not difficult of application. Among the first should assuredly be the better protection of the immigrant from the very beginning to the end of his journey. Every immigrant who writes home to his fatherland that he has been robbed or deceived in any way whatever on arriving in this country, inflicts upon this country a positive injury. Such messages are standing warnings to others against crossing the Atlantic. They are used by the prudent and influential at home to dissuade neighbors from following the wronged one's example, and, like the circles in a pool when a stone is dropped into it, the tale of his misfortune is made wider and wider by communication.

The good of the immigrant ought to be more deeply and thoroughly considered and provided for in this country than it yet has been. It is not a matter of local, but of national importance; not a matter alone of philanthropic, but of commercial interest. The value of each immigrant arriving on our shores is variously calculated at from $300 to $1,000 to the country. Such precious commodities ought surely to be taken excellent care of. Perhaps the true course would be to begin to take care of them from the place of shipment. It would not answer, of course, to take any possible action that should conflict with international comity; yet, with full and cautious respect for this, it might be practicable so to instruct and provide for intending emigrants, before they leave their own homes, as to assure them in advance of safe, honorable, and considerate treatment until they are put down at their point of destination.

MINOR TOPICS.

PIUS IX. was not long ago very near being reduced to the choice of an asylum on board a British frigate. The Archbishop of Paris, according to a Cable telegram, has found a guarantee for his good treatment by the Commune in Prince BISMARCK. There was probably no Protestant who objected to the hospitality extended by a Protestant Power to an amiable but misguided old man, and there is certainly no one who will grudge the liberal and accomplished Primate of France his present campaign. It is rather a hard destiny, however, which forces the Church of Rome to accept the good offices of heretics, and one which should open its eyes to the gross anachronism of its late arrogant pretensions. The Church is at present badly in want of an "eldest son." Prince BISMARCK will hardly do; what do the Ultramontanes say to "Boss" TWEED?

The Commune is in its sixth week of the possession of Paris, and the southern forts are not yet silenced. The "Reds" are divided against each other, but they are still able to keep the Versailles Government outside of the "sovereign city." What the struggle tends to is the darkest of existing problems. France will have none of the Commune, even should it hold out another six weeks. But it is also becoming clear that it is equally tired of M. THIERS and his colleagues, as well as of the National Assembly which sustains them. The success of the insurrection is as much a measure of the indifference of the country as of the strength of the rebels. An Imperialist General heads the troops of the Republic, and a populace who want anything but a Republic supplies them. Between brutalized anarchy and temporizing weakness, the outlook of freedom in France is dark indeed, and there is reason to fear that the strife of the factions has only commenced.

It will be remembered that last Summer, Mr. SAMPSON, a shoe manufacturer in North Adams, Mass., resolved to liberate himself from the tyranny of the Crispin organization. He sent an agent to San Francisco, who returned with a number of Chinamen, who were set at work, and soon learned how to make shoes. Threats of violence were made at the time by the "Crispins," but no overt act was committed. We now learn that the experiment has succeeded; the Chinamen are good shoemakers, and the manufactory turns out work as rapidly and of as good quality as before the strike. So well pleased is Mr. SAMPSON with the work of the Chinamen, their close attention to business, and quickness to learn, that he is now arranging to bring from San Francisco another supply of these laborers. And the country does not seem to be quite ruined yet.

If people are not fully prepared for changes of the weather they have only themselves to blame. The weather forecasts, which we daily publish from the Bureau at Washington, are unexceptionally accurate. We have watched them for weeks past, and they rarely turn out to be wrong. Yesterday we were promised rain—and we had it. "Clearing weather" is now reported as probable. These weather reports cannot fail to prove of great service to the shipping and commercial interests, and the Bureau may fairly be congratulated on the great success it has already achieved.

The story of the pardon of the murderer DUFFY by the Governor, which was published in the TIMES of yesterday, was denied as a late hour last night by a telegram from Albany. We can only say, in reply, that our information was received from parties who were believed to know all the facts of the case intimately. One of our informants was a person to whom Judge "BOB" EDMONDS stated, in the presence of witnesses, that he brought DUFFY from the prison, and that he (EDMONDS) and Senator CAGDWELL were with THOMAS and procured the pardon, as stated by us. Another was a Police officer, who, being one of our most trustworthy Judges that he and others had actually seen DUFFY upon the street in this City several days ago. Besides these witnesses, we may mention the Clerk of the Court in which DUFFY was convicted, who told our reporter that the man had been pardoned. It was stated last evening, in the Eighth Ward, that he had not been seen in Europe, but that he was quietly secreted with his friends might be able to get him out of the way. When the TIMES story appeared, however, it is said that he was hurried back to Auburn under a special order.

"One of our local" organs of slander has found a victim with perseverance and pluck enough to compel restitution for a recklessly libel. In the Fall of 1869, JONATHAN L. SANDERSON, a Brooklyn lawyer of unblemished reputation, was traduced by the Sunday Mercury. Many people have been no better and since, but untutored purity by contempt for the origin of the libel, and purity by distrust of the local Courts, they have abstained from prosecution. Mr. SANDERSON, however, discharged a duty to himself, as well as to society and decent journalism, by prosecuting the libeler. The Circuit term of the Supreme Court, holding session in Brooklyn, awarded five thousand dollars damages, the General Term confirmed the decision, which the Court of Appeals at Albany has finally indorsed. A legal struggle extending over three and a half years is an ordeal which not many people would care to face, but its triumphant progress and termination ought to be an encouragement to those who have been similarly wronged, and a warning to the consumers of journalism.

Judge DOWLING declares that he and his associates are determined to break up the villainy of the police shops. The energetic Justice of the Court of Sessions is not a man to go to war without counting the cost, but everybody who knows how important a plank in the platform of our City Democracy is the business of police will be disposed to doubt even Judge DOWLING'S ability to destroy it. The Tenby Ring is nearly as influential as the Erie Ring, and their break up is a task almost as arduous. All honor, however, to the Judge who proclaims his readiness to send them to the Penitentiary. Next time let us hope that some larger fish than the Chatham-street dealers will find their way into his Judicial net.

The revolutionary fever, which is epidemic in Central and South America, is extending. The affairs of Mexico, which are never in a very settled condition, are about to be further disturbed. JUAREZ, who has the confidence of the army, intends to run it in electing himself President. LERDO and his partisans hope to deprive him of the command of the army, and render him ineligible to the office of President by impeachment. Should they fail, an appeal to arms will be made, and the country will be wasted by civil war. If the people of MEXICO exercised half the energy in developing their country which they devote to its destruction, they would soon become rich and prosperous. Their country is of marvellous fertility, and rich in mines of precious metals, and it would, if the people were peaceful and industrious, assume a high position among the nations of the world.

AMUSEMENTS

Germania Nacht.
ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

To-night Miss SHERMAN will give her farewell performance in America. The play to be acted is "Mary Stuart." We are confident that the assemblage will be in all respects worthy of the occasion. A great gathering of our Austrian, German fellow-citizens is anticipated; and we hear that the presentation to Miss SHERMAN of a testimonial will add a new and agreeable feature to the attractions of the evening.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.

The run of "Richard III." draws to a close. All that zealous and energetic management could do to make the revival a grand success has been done. It was plain, however, from the first, that the public did not fancy the original text of the tragedy, and were disappointed in its chief figure. Mr. NEIL WARNER has since gained credit for a spirited and careful embodiment of Richard, and to-morrow night the tragedy will pass away in a blaze of glory. For that occasion, GEORGE, the Count Soubise, has been prevailed on to assume the robes of the unscrupulous king's tyrant, and from the interest with which this announcement has been received, we infer that a crowded and enthusiastic audience will respond to it.

"SANSUMA'S ROYAL JAPS."

The curious company, advertised as "Royal Japs," are performing nightly at San Francisco Hall. Among many unique features of their entertainment, those of the "magic cup," and other sporate incubation feats are notable. The "Jap song and dance" provokes no end of mirth and surprise, and people who like, of all things, to see "something new," will not fail to be gratified if they pay a visit just now to San Francisco Hall.

WOOD'S MUSEUM.

All that even suggests the weird and famous figure of Vandercecken should have attraction in this old Dutch City, and the last dramatic production at Wood's Museum has proved consequently among its best cards. "The Streets of New-York" has been revived with acceptance here, and can be seen every night, while "The Flying Dutchman" may be revived in every afternoon. Added to these delights, "Little LULU" and "ROB ROY MACGREGOR, Jr." are daily on exhibition, while on Sunday evenings, to complete the circle of curiosities, a lecture is delivered by Mr. GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN.

STADT THEATER.

Opera-goers, and especially those who believe in the "music of the future," are reminded that to-night WAGNER'S "Lohengrin" is to be sung for the last time this season. We have already described the introduction of this remarkable work on the boards of the Stadt Theatre, and therefore need only advise those who wish to hear "Lohengrin" not to miss the last present opportunity of doing so.

THE AMERICAN DRAMAS.

At the Olympic, "Horizon," and at Lina Edwin's Theatre, "Pluck," are still asserting the claims of the national stars. Those pieces are attracting good houses, and are, in their respective ways, deserving of attention. There is good acting in both, and in one, at least, respectable writing, while, through witnessing them, a not altogether profane lesson is conveyed as to what in the way of American drama the general public are willing to indorse and to go to see.

MR. MATHEWS AT THE PARK-AVENUE.

The success of Mr. CHARLES MATHEWS is becoming quite remarkable, and since either justice Mr. DALY'S sagacity in making the engagement. "Married for Money" is quite beaten in attractiveness by "The Critic," and the seats are taken, we are assured, for many days in advance. This speaks well for public taste as well as for Mr. MATHEWS' undiminished powers, and we shall be glad to see the great comedian's performances extended to the end of the season.

WALLACK'S THEATER.

The "Liar" continues to draw fine houses here, and "The Nervous Man," with the strong help of Mr. JOHN BROUGHAM, brings the performances to a close each night, with immense approval. For the matinée to-morrow are offered, we perceive, "Woodcock's Little Game" and "His Last Legs."

PHILHARMONIC REHEARSAL.

A rehearsal of the Philharmonic Society takes place to-day, at the Academy, at 3½ o'clock. The orchestra of 100 will be in attendance, under Herr BERGMANN.

THE NORTH-WEST PASSAGE.

The Arctic Expedition of Capt. Hall to Sail in May.

The Steamer Polaris, Her Officers and Crew—Their Comforts and Surroundings—The Proposed Route—Capt. Hall Sanguine of Success.

Last Spring the Polar explorer, Capt. C. F. HALL, returned from the Arctic regions in the Scotch-built whaler Annie Gifford, after having passed five years of almost uninterrupted danger and hardship in endeavoring to ascertain positively the fate of his distinguished predecessor, Sir JOHN FRANKLIN, and at the same time solve the problem of the North-west passage. The Captain, nothing daunted by his ill-success, has always believed that it was in his power to discover the open Polar Sea, and demonstrate to the world that there was not only a North-west passage to it, but at a certain season of the year the passage was free of ice "the great Greenland ice pack," and therefore practicable for all purposes of navigation. Capt. HALL'S explorations extended up through King William's Land, to nearly 69° north. The report of this expedition, which was pursued under the liberal patronage of Mr. HENRY GRINNELL, was laid before Congress immediately after the explorer's return, and aid was solicited from the United States Government for a second expedition. An appropriation of $100,000 was made for "Arctic explorations," and after much difficulty a portion of it was assigned to Capt. HALL in aid of his project. With this material aid, together with that of Messrs. GRINNELL and HENRY, he at once went zealously to work to prepare for another battle with the ice, but this time with at least adequate provision for the track to be undertaken.

THE POLARIS.

A powerful steam-tug of 400 tons measurement was procured from the Navy Department. The vessel was placed upon the ways and thoroughly overhauled. Her timbers were strengthened about the fore-peak and a sheathing of heavy iron plates, firmly clamped and bolted together, was made to cover her bows from the garboard streak to within a few inches of the water-ways, in order to better enable her to force her way through the thick-ribbed ice-pack. In fact, every improvement which experience in Arctic navigation and skill in ship-building could suggest was perfected in the little topsail schooner-rigged steamer, which her commander has christened the Polaris.

Capt. E. O. BUDDINGTON, an old and experienced whaling master from the village of Groton, opposite New-London, Conn., is to be the sailing-master, and will carry with him, as assistants, officers who have for years hunted the storms of the lone Arctic Winter. The crew is to consist of twelve seamen, besides two cooks and the same number of stewards, and four firemen. All the seamen are picked, intelligent men, and it is said that there is not one of them that is not capable of navigating the ship himself. A corps of scientific gentlemen also accompanies the expedition, consisting of an astronomer, a geographer and a meteorologist. It is also said that Dr. HERMAN BESSELS, an eminent German naturalist and chemist, a graduate of Heidelberg, and who was a member of the recent Resolute expedition, commanded by Sir E. BELCHER, accompanies Capt. HALL'S expedition in the former capacity. There are to be two engineers, Mr. EMIL SCHUMAN and JOHN WILSON, the former chief, and WILSON the assistant. The Polaris will have two masts. The after compartment is to be divided into state-rooms for the commander, the scientific corps, the sailing-master, his mates, and the engineers. The forward compartment forward will be fitted up with bunks in every convenience and comfort imaginable, for the men who are to pass within its narrow confines many a weary hour of loneliness during the depressing gloom of the long Arctic night.

AN IMPORTANT FEATURE.

Two Esquimaux, Joe and his "cooney," or wife, HANNAH, who have been with Capt. HALL a number of years, and who have become partially civilized and speak the English language intelligibly, also go with the expedition, the former as the interpreter and the latter in the capacity of seamstress. It will be recollected that the woolen clothing of the white man is absolutely worthless to protect the Arctic traveler from the cold piercing blasts to which he is exposed, and the costume of the Innuit or Esquimaux, consisting of the deer-skin knee-bag,—a sack jumper, with fur hood, the sealskin breeches, the deer, seal and sidek-dask stockings, and the mukluk boots, fastened with stout moccasins of seal-skin, with light coverings, have been adopted as the only articles of apparel that are impervious to the inclemencies of the fearful climate. The Esquimaux tailoress is, therefore, an important and really indispensable personage aboard the Polaris.

THE ROUTE.

It is understood that Capt. HALL will sail from Washington instead of New-York, as was at first supposed, about the 25th of May; and the seamen, supplies, &c., engaged in this City, will be transported to a Government tender in a few days prior to the departure of the expedition. Leaving Cape Resolution by the middle of June, it will enter Hudson Straits, and steaming slowly up the broad channel, will occupy the time until the peak ice opens in July in trading with the Esquimaux at Upper and Lower Savage and Southampton Islands, the former situated on the Straits and the latter at the head of Hudson Bay. They will be provided with fresh provisions for cleaning, and will provide themselves with several packs of the indispensable Esquimaux dog, with which to hunt and drag their heavy sleds. As soon as the Straits are clear of ice the steamer proceeds to Repulse Bay, Capt. HALL'S old winter quarters, and if it is practicable, will then make an effort to force her through "the middle pack" ice into Fox's Channel, and up through King William's Land, to about 69° north. Here they are expected to spend their first Winter.

Early in the Spring of 1872, after having secured the furs, training the dogs, establishing depots, and making other important preparations, the party will leave the vessel and start, with their boats secured to the sleds, and amply provisioned for six months, on their journey over the ice to Baffin's Bay, Smith's Sound, and, it is hoped, the Open Polar Sea. The Polaris will be fitted out with every necessary required for the perilous voyage her crew will undergo, and the ingenious contrivances to economize space which have been invented, she will be provisioned with a patent apparatus for feeding her furnaces with seal oil instead of coal.

ENTHUSIASTIC VOLUNTEERS.

The Commander of the Polaris reports that he is literally overwhelmed with applications from every quarter of the Union, from persons requesting to be allowed to accompany the expedition, not the least of which appeals are from enthusiastic young ladies of wealth and position, and even ladies of the same social standing, but who evidently little dream of the hardships and extreme dangers with which the explorations will inevitably be attended. Capt. HALL surmises that he will be absent about two years on a sail, and hopes to return to the United States by October, 1873.

He is very sanguine of success, and asserts that the arctic experience he has already gained, and the adaptation of his system to the habits of the Esquimaux, by long residence among them, secure him of his ability to accomplish much toward forcing the icy barrier to the long-sought object of discovery, which could not possibly otherwise be achieved.

Virginia Financiers Perplexed—A Question of Responsibility for a Note.

From the Lynchburg Republican, April 22.

Some eight or ten days ago one of our large operators made a draft on a Northern house for a considerable amount, which was at once placed to his credit in the People's Savings Bank of this city. On the same day the gentleman who made the draft drew a check in favor of one of our merchants for $1,000, and the merchant to whom the check was given, Saturday, deposited it in the First National Bank, where he kept his regular account, sent the check to the People's Savings Bank for certification. When it was promptly marked "good," and with this indorsement it was duly credited and received on deposit in the First National. In the closing of accounts for the day, however, the People's Savings Bank refused to honor the check, which it had marked "good," on the ground that there was some irregularity in the draft upon the credit of which the check had been certified. The check was then protested for non-payment, and as the case was a novel one, at the instance of the owner of the check, a special meeting of the Board of the First National Bank was held yesterday to determine who was the party responsible—the payee, or the bank certifying. The decision of the Board, we learn, was that the check was the property of the bank which marked it "good," and that that institution would first be held responsible for its payment, but that in case it could not be made out of that bank, the payee of the note would then be held liable. The matter has recently been much discussed in financial circles, and the ultimate decision, as to the party liable, will be watched with considerable interest.

THROUGH THE SOUTH.

A Visit to Alexander H. Stephens—His Home at Crawfordville—His Views—"No Surrender"—The Ku-klux Not a Myth—Atlanta Again—A Cock-fight and its Results—A Visit to Gov. Bullock—Georgia's Condition—Matters in General.

From Our Special Correspondent.

ATLANTA, Ga., Friday, April 21, 1871.

About sixty-four miles from Augusta, on the Georgia Railroad, is located the town of Crawfordville, the county-seat of Taliaferro County. In its own right, the place possesses nothing to attract the traveler's attention; its population hardly amounts to five hundred souls; its trade, though good enough for a place of its size, would hardly be deemed worthy of notice among the busy marts of the commercial Metropolis; its old Court-house, built, according to the inscription, in 1806, is of plain brick, surmounted by a little wooden cupola, and surrounded by the high hitching-posts for the country gentry fond of this sort of "exercise;" no large residences mark the abode of some princely planter, no large and reputable trees invite the passer-by to seek shelter from the noonday heat in the shade of their overhanging foliage. In fine, Crawfordville is an unattractive, uninviting locality to the casual visitor. Yet within its precincts is found the home of one of Georgia's greatest statesmen, the residence of one whose name his townsmen dwell on with pride, and whose person they all respect and love. It is the home of ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS, one of the ablest exponents ever vouchsafed to the doctrine of State rights, the Ex-Vice-President of the so-called Southern Confederacy, "Little Aleck," as the villagers call their hero. I spent last Monday at Crawfordville, and thinking some account of a visit to Mr. STEPHENS might prove interesting to many, will attempt to give a sketch of my visit to Liberty Hall.

LIBERTY HALL.

Mr. STEPHENS is proverbially hospitable, and in his present affliction being confined to the house, he is always glad to welcome a visitor. Sending on my letter of introduction as a sort of herald of my approach, and accompanying the herald by a "flag of truce" in the shape of a letter explaining that my mission was non-professional, and intended to be of a purely social nature, I opened the gate to "Liberty Hall" at about 9 o'clock on Monday afternoon. Mr. STEPHENS' home stands on a little hill to the right of the railroad track, going north. It is a plain, unpretending, three-story frame house, in the centre of quite a large square lot. Trees and flowers are scattered about the grounds without any pretense to order or beauty. A row of trees, however, lines the approach to the house, and from the porch you have a view the whole length of the main street in Crawfordville. On the left of the house are the out-buildings, kitchen, and servants' quarters. Walking up the steps to the door, which is always open to the stranger, a bright-looking mulatto girl came forward, to whom I gave my name. Being requested to "walk in," I followed her through the hall, extending through the centre of the house, and passing through the library, a chaotic-looking apartment, filled with everything and all its relatives, entered Mr. STEPHENS' room. Warm as was the day, a bright coal fire was burning in the grate, and every window was firmly fastened down—Mr. STEPHENS being a victim of that air-abhorring disease known as rheumatism. A cheery "Ah, how do you do, Mr. ——? glad to see you, Sir," directed my attention to a little figure sitting in a chair by the fireside, wearing a warm felt hat and smoking a good-sized pipe. Shaking hands with Mr. STEPHENS, he introduced me to the other two gentlemen in the room—one his physician—and assuring me that his pet dog, who had set up a violent barking as I entered, was "blind and would do no harm," he courteously offered me a chair, and I profited by the few minutes during which the gentlemen were leaving to look around the room. I have seen more comfortable rooms. Two beds stood against the wall, a book-case in each corner, a few chairs and a couple of tables littered up with a confused mass of papers, letters, books, documents (among which I noticed a pamphlet speech by Senator BAYARD) and newspapers made up the furniture of the room. On the floor were scattered in wild profusion copies of newspapers from every section of the land.

Mr. STEPHENS' appearance is familiar to most people; his spare figure so very slight and frail, his large head and piercing eyes; but to me, who had never seen him before, he seemed but a mere skeleton. But when he talks the man is forgotten in the charm of his conversation. For three hours and a quarter Mr. STEPHENS talked with me on almost all subjects, and my only regret was that the time was up so soon. Firm in his convictions, emphatic and at times eloquent in his comparisons, illustrating all points with illustrations drawn from a long life of varied experiences, full of reminiscences of the old political times when statesmen filled the places now occupied by politicians, Mr. STEPHENS could not but be entertaining as well as instructive. I was amused, during our interview, with the freedom in the manners of the children of his household servants. They came in and out at will, squatted on the floor and played with the dog, or stood before the fire and stared to their hearts' content, took part in the conversation whenever they desired, being humored in everything by their much-loved master. In his bachelor life his servants are his family and their welfare has always been a source of anxiety and comfort to him.

MR. STEPHENS' VIEWS.

I should like very much to give a detailed account of Mr. STEPHENS' sayings, for I know it would be interesting; but, with the exception of a few points which I have his permission to repeat, I must be silent. Mr. STEPHENS adheres as firmly as ever to the doctrine of State rights, and sees in its triumph alone the salvation of the Republic from a centralized despotism. He considers the Thirteenth Amendment as having been fully ratified and valid, as the natural result of the war. The Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments he considered as "gross usurpations of power, passed by force and fraud," with seven of the original thirteen colonies unrepresented. He would not hear of any such a thing as "accepting the situation" with those two amendments in existence. He did not, nor did any one, propose to do away with negro suffrage, but desired to avoid what now existed—an hostility of race to race. What there ought to be was a political division of each race. The whites needed the blacks, and were dependent on them for labor. It was to their interest and advantage, therefore, to treat them well. On the other hand, the blacks were ignorant and dependent, as is a child on its father, and as a mass, they acquired knowledge with great difficulty. They sought "white" advice and counsel always; before every election they came to him from all over the country, seeking advice and a clear statement of the issues at hand. Not one of his negroes had left him, and the feeling among them was general that they were better cared for, and prospered better where they remained with their old masters.

THE KUKLUX.

I asked Mr. STEPHENS about the Kuklux. He said that, unquestionably at the close of the war there had been such a thing as a Kuklux organization, and he was sorry to see their papers denying its existence. That was wrong. As originally organized, it was intended by its leaders to make it the means of preserving law and order in lawless regions, and was intended as a guard against the depredations and outrages incidental to an unsettled and disturbed condition of things. As an organization it did not now exist. What is known as the Kuklux was "but the scum, the rascally leavings of the organization." They had committed many abominable and dastardly outrages, which all respectable men regretted and condemned as strongly as he did. In further conversation, Mr. STEPHENS spoke of the Tammany Ring in New-York as an "abomination" and a disgrace. Of Gov. HOFFMAN, he said that he knew of nothing against him, but he did not know him. Of Gen. HANCOCK and FRANK BLAIR, he spoke in strong terms of admiration, the latter being a "man of nerve." The conversation turned on State rights, the political future, the next campaign, the condition of the South and its needs, &c., but as Mr. STEPHENS desired the conversation to be considered as confidential, I observe his request. Some of his political predictions, as to the votes of States in the next election, I jotted down in my note-book for future reference, since Mr. STEPHENS "staked his head" on their accuracy, and said that he had never been mistaken in predicting the vote of a State since 1844. Such a stake would be worth winning.

ATLANTA AGAIN.

I enjoyed my visit exceedingly, and should have been glad had I been able to accept his invitation to spend the night with him. On leaving the house I met his physician, and inquired about Mr. STEPHENS' health. He said that his general health was better than it had been for some years back. It may be remembered that the fall of a gate deprived him of the use of his lower limbs.

At midnight I took the train for Atlanta, reaching the Kimball House at an early hour the next morning, and found everybody full to overflowing with the great "cock-fight," which was to begin that day, between the two States of Alabama and Georgia. By the way, in my former letter from this place, I spoke of Stone Mountain as the locality of HOOKER'S celebrated fight. That was of course a mistake, as I had mixed up Lookout Mountain in Tennessee, with Stone Mountain in Georgia. It was KILPATRICK who, at Stone Mountain, dismounted his cavalry and, using them as infantry, dislodged the rebels from their rifle-pits. And still another mistake: I underrated the importance of the "chicken peck," having represented it as being between two cities in the same State. Instead of that, it was a grand contest between the two States of Georgia and Alabama.

A SOUTHERN COCK FIGHT.

Cock-fighting is a common means of settling disputed questions in the South. With that progressive wisdom and enlightened civilization which renders one Southerner equal to five Yankees, and enables them so successfully to seek and find a "last ditch," the Southern mind settles disputed questions without waiting for the slow and tedious arbitration process of a court of law. As to exactly what the origin of the present contest was, a diligent research has failed to enlighten me. Possibly one State rashly asserted that it could raise better cotton than the other; perhaps it claimed for itself a greater amount of religious tolerance; perhaps a bold Georgian had vauntingly boasted that the fair Alabamians could not "hold a candle" to the dark-haired beauties of his native State; possibly an Alabama brave had suggested that carpet-bags brought a higher price within the dominions of his neighbor than on his own "sacred soil," or that black was blacker the further South you went, or, in fine, possibly all these issues combined, and a few thousand others which I will not mention, led directly or indirectly to the resolve that seventeen Alabama roosters must meet seventeen Georgia roosters in mortal strife, the same classic contest to be governed by the ancient and venerable laws of the cock-pit. "When you are with the Romans, do as the Romans do." I went to the cock-fight, and I do not expect to go again so long as I am a free agent. It is a brutal sport, and where the excitement or the glory comes in I can't say. But, did I belong to the Darwinian school, I should have pointed to the spectacle as proving the degeneracy of man from the nobler animals from whom he dates his origin. Certainly for pluck, endurance, courage and bravery, I would like to see the one man in the crowd of spectators that was the equal of the game cocks who were fighting to the death for his edification.

Being accoutred with long, sharp, steel gaffs, the cocks are brought by the "pitters" into the centre of a large circle, placed carefully on the ground facing each other. As soon as let loose their training leads them to fly with fury at one another, seeking to cause the gaffs to penetrate as far as possible into their opponent. All around the circle an anxious crowd of roughs, "sports," "fancy" men, and gentlemen also, stand with eager eyes and bated breath as they watch the fierce contest. At length Alabama puts his gaff through the neck of Georgia and both come to the ground; the first round is fought, and Alabama flaps his wings, crows loudly and walks proudly around the circle. Again are they placed in position, Georgia prostrate on the ground, Alabama flies at him, and so strong is the "game" instinct that Georgia makes a desperate effort, and succeeds in wounding his adversary. This ends the second round. After placing them in position again, and permitting Alabama to once more plunge its gaffs into dying Georgia, the latter party cry enough, and Alabama wins the first fight of the "main." And so on for three days, seventeen matches were fought, Alabama winning by one cock. Betting was exceedingly lively, and a good deal of money changed hands. But the "sports" were not satisfied, so another "main" of seven chickens was arranged, to wind up with a horse-race. In this contest Georgia came out ahead, and so some of the lost money came back again.

INTERVIEW WITH GOV. BULLOCK.

Before leaving Atlanta I had the pleasure of paying my respects to Gov. BULLOCK. Accompanied by Col. HINCKLEY, of the State Agricultural Society, I spent a pleasant half hour with the Governor at the Executive office. Gov. BULLOCK is a fine-looking man, genial and courteous, and popular with all except, perhaps, those with whom no Northern man can be popular. He said that the State was in a good condition, and that I would find the people devoting their attention to agriculture and letting politics alone. The great political mistake they had made was when they expelled the negro members of the Legislature. It was a common saying that "what a man has not he wants," &c, as soon as the negroes found themselves deprived of office, why "office" was what they most desired. Something being said about the appointment of the negro SIMMS as a Judge, which the Savannah Bar considered to be intended as an insult to them, the Governor explained the appointment by stating that the Judges in the Mayor's Court and in the Superior Court were all Democrats, and the negroes sent in petitions by the basketful saying that they could not obtain justice. He did not believe that to be the case. Still, the negroes fancied it was; and fancy with them was strong as fact. Besides, they were the larger proportion of persons coming before the Court, and, of course, their claim was entitled to consideration. So, out of thirty appointments, he selected this one negro—who was, by the way, a bright mulatto, and had served with credit during three session of the Legislature, aiding to make the laws he was called on to administer. They had one negro's Court where there was no occasion for a white man to go. The subordinate officers of the Court did not like it, and managed to be "off fishing" when it was time for them to serve. They were clearly liable for contempt of Court. With regard to the Kuklux bill, the Governor thought that it came too late to be of any service. Two years ago it might have been of use. The Kuklux now were the very lowest classes, and the remedy against them was by action by the planters themselves. This action they were beginning to take. The condition of things had been much improved during the preceding two years. For instance, but lately some of the negroes working with a certain planter had been warned off by the Kuklux. He went to some poor whites living near by, and told them that if the thing occurred again he would hold them responsible, although he did not know that they had anything to do with it. "The thing" never occurred again. The question of labor was the vital point with the planters. This class the Kuklux bill would only irritate and cause them to cease their efforts in the right direction. He was trying, as far as possible, to use the moderate Southern element in his official appointments. The only practical way of enforcing the Kuklux bill effectively would be to put a military force in the disturbed district, giving an officer power to examine every man, woman and child in the district. They might then find out the perpetrators of the deeds of violence. Speaking of the agricultural prospects of the State, the Governor thought they needed good farmers very much indeed. There was a prejudice against raising grass or clover. They paid $30 a ton for hay in Atlanta, when it could be raised for $8 a ton. Two young men who came South with SHERMAN'S army, noticed some land, and at the close of the war bought a large tract at $5 per acre. They subsoiled and cultivated it properly, and now were selling it for smaller farms at $15 an acre.

MATTERS IN GENERAL.

Col. LEWIS, the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has been making a tour through the State, and reports that the prospect is rather discouraging. The people will not aid in the enforcement of the law, and do not seem to appreciate the value of a common school education. In its process of undoing everything that has been done, the coming Democratic Legislature will probably repeal the law giving the State a common school system.

In conclusion, as I am about leaving Georgia for Tennessee: Georgia seems an energetic, busy State, presenting a marked contrast to the apathetic condition of things in South Carolina. The latter State is like the man who, having been thrown on his back, cries out that he is dead, and makes no attempt to rise, while wasting what little strength is left in frantic appeals to those who cannot be of assistance. Georgia, per contra, instead of shouting, tries to see what she can do for herself, and finds that she can raise herself by making the proper effort. By the time that South Carolina is tired of shouting, Georgia will be in as good a condition as she was before her fall. I commend the tourist to Atlanta as a busy, thrifty city, where he will find a continually-increasing activity that will surprise him if he has previously had much to do with other Southern cities. At any rate, he will always find good, solid comfort within the walls of the H. I. Kimball House.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

A Plea for the Veterans of the Army.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Will you, if consistent with your views of propriety, give the following communication a place in the columns of your widely-circulating journal, thereby giving expression to the feelings of a large number of your readers, many of whom are wishing away the dull monotony of an existence at this out-of-the-world region on the frontiers of civilization?

By an act of Congress, of July, 1870, a large number of army officers were recently mustered out of the service, who, many of them, had passed the greater portion of their existence in the defense of their country in times of danger, and in times of peace, (if peace can ever be said to exist, while the scalping-knife and tomahawk of the savage are continually given employment on our frontiers,) guarding the interests of the "infant Republic" "from her open foes with out, and domestic traitors within." It seems very unjust that those men, many of whom are now gray-headed and war-worn veterans, should, after years of privation and toil in the camp, and on the battle-field, just, forsooth, because it costs the Government a few dollars, more or less, to pay them for their services, be cast adrift upon the wide world, without a profession, without a competency to support them in the declining years of their existence, many of them with families growing up around them. It seems that this, "the best Government on the face of the earth," could scarcely perpetrate a more cruel and heartless injustice than this. There is no doubt that there was a great deal of private animosity and ill-feeling at the bottom of the whole transaction, and that many worthy and efficient officers received their dismissal through the allegations made against them by officers higher in authority or influence than themselves; this, of course, being done without their knowledge or suspicion, thereby debarring them the privilege of disproving those charges, and consequently securing the attainment of the object aimed at by the allegator. Should such be the case, (and I am confident that in many instances it is,) the least that could be done by those having the authority, would be to allow the victims of the injustice to know who were the instigators and promoters of the conspiracies against their good names and fame. Were this course pursued, I am pretty confident that, in three cases out of seven at least, there would be found as much, if not more, of private rancor and hereditary hatred at the bottom of the business. There is evidence at hand that shows there are some of the "ostracised" at work to probe the matter to the bottom. I heartily indorse their movement, and sincerely hope that their efforts may not prove futile. I know that there are some deserving the full measure of the implied unworthiness, and I also know there are many who suffered the infliction that are more worthy today to hold the positions from which they were removed than the very men who were assigned to fill their appointments. If it is, as many infer, a measure of a purely economical necessity, and that officers were, as a general rule, selected ex pro formâ, I think that there should at least have been some measure provided for the future of the repudiated victims. What a pitiful sight to witness a poor old man of sixty, whose frame has been exposed to the pitiless blasts of the howling winds of the Western prairies, whose whitened locks tell of days of toil, and nights of sleepless vigilance, ever ready to leap to his foes at the first whoop of the painted "red devil;" whose palsied hand gives token of sinews overstrained in into and death-encounters with those foes of the white settlers, whose knife is always sharp, and whose rifle is always sure. What a pity I am not to see that old man come forward, with a voice in which tears shoke his utterance, and ask for the pitiful sum which the justice of "Uncle Sam" allows him to claim as a sine qua non for years of patient and patriotic services. Fiat justitia! Looking back upon his past record, is there one who can with anything approaching the semblance of decency exclaim: "Well done, good and faithful servant"? There has most been a faithful servant, and we will reward thee. Here, take then this; it will serve to remind thee of the goodness and liberality of "the best Government the world ever shone upon." It will, perchance, keep thee from starving and freezing for a few months, when, perchance we may require thy services again. We may have open battles for thee to fight and win for us. We may have a great and glorious war upon our hands in a few months, and when we require thy services we shall call upon thee and shall hope to find thee ever ready to unsheath thy sword; and, lying it upon the altar of thy country that has so liberally rewarded thee heretofore, exclaim: Here I am! ever ready, ever prompt to the call of my country when she needs my services. Here I am! ready again to shed the few remaining drops of blood in my veins, for have I not been liberally rewarded for past services? What should I care that, when those services were not long needed, I should have been exiled from the threshhold of the War Department? Nothing!

JUSTITIA.

CAMP BAKER, M. T., Tuesday, April 11, 1871.

The American versus The Papal, Sole-Dieuist Catholic, Idea.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Again, and it cannot too often do so, the TIMES, in its article headed "Republican Policy," has struck a chord, the vibrations of which will find the readiest response in the truly American heart. To all our people who own the Protestant faith, under whatever denomination, the startling fact should be brought home, and kept forever before them, that they have living in their midst, at their very firesides, a powerful, unscrupulous, as to the means used, body of men, who have sworn allegiance to a foreign potentate, the Pope of Rome, and are bound by the most stringent oaths to disregard all obligations as citizens, and to regard as null and void all laws that this potentate pronounces to be of no effect. They cannot have it too strongly impressed upon them that the vast majority of this priestly horde are foreign born and foreign educated; that they are thus incapable of receiving an American idea, being fast bound in the most slavish submission to the will of the head of their religious denomination. They cannot be too often told that these men are the natural and most effective allies and supporters of all Governments, under whatever name they exist, of which slavery, whether of body, of mind or of conscience is the foundation. They need to be told that, with but rare exceptions, these men, during the rebellion of the South, followed the lead of their head, in sympathy, either openly, as in the South, or secretly, as in the North with the slaveocracy, and with their abettors and sympathizers everywhere. And why? Because, with the success of the rebellion, another large mass of ignorant and debased human beings would have been added, in time, to the already equally ignorant and debased mass of foreign birth, who are the servile instruments of this priestly class in carrying out their plans. Our Protestant people need to be told, in words of flame, that this is not fiction, not the sooth-sayings of an overworked brain, but damning facts of which our Government, by its agents, both at home and abroad, was aware during the rebellion. Every day but adds to the already overwhelming proof of this wide-spread priestly conspiracy against the most sacred of human rights, and in opposition to which but a few feeble, halting voices of their own order, if raised, are but too speedily silenced, either through purely ambitious, personal motives, or from the terrors—the offspring of the slavish fear of mental slavery, engrafted in early life—of a Papal excommunication.

If the Protestant Press and pulpit of the country, through a culpable indifference to the very corner-stone of their faith, refrain from arousing the masses to the dangers that threaten them, happily a Father RICHEN tells us that the de-Protestantising of the country "is only a matter of time;" while the Tablet, the leading organ of Popery, declares "The American idea must give way," and with it, "whatever contradicts or does not accord with the Catholic idea," that is, with the abject submission of body, mind and soul to priestly dictation. Think of it.

SCRUTATOR.

Demoralization in the Police Force.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It is only through the TIMES that law-abiding citizens have any opportunity for rebuking the many political evils which at present fester in the midst of our municipal system. Facts have recently come to my personal notice which show how thoroughly the efficiency of our Police Department has been undermined by the corrupt and evil influences which seem to control its workings. The inhabitants of our City who have no opportunities for observing the extent to which the able "Metropolitans" of the old force have become demoralized under the new regime, may hesitate in believing that those who should be independent in the faithful discharge of their duties as conservators of the public peace, are trammeled and fettered on every side by dishonest expressions of power, which find their birth in corner groggeries.

Within the past few weeks an officer attached to the Nineteenth Precinct, while making his rounds, came upon a man who was acting suspiciously. The time was past 2 o'clock in the morning. He refused to give any account of himself, and was consequently arrested and conveyed to the Station-house. In the presence of the Sergeant in charge, the man directed against the policeman all the epithets of vulgarity his foul mind could suggest, interlarding this obscenity and insult with intimations of his political power in the Ward, and giving the officer to understand that he would soon feel its effect. Within a few hours after the threat was fulfilled by the transfer of the faithful officer to a down-town precinct—no charges made, no reason given; but it is understood to have been through the influence of a liquor-dealer whose place has long had an unenviable notoriety. Had the officer been less courageous, less faithful in the performance of his duty, the ill-will of the ruffian might have been avoided. But surely all who respect the law will gladly extend their praise to one who does his duty fearlessly. CIVIS.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Business at the Exchange, yesterday, (April 27,) was more active than on any day thus far this week, and the result more satisfactory, as the greater portion of the property offered was disposed of. The attendance was also better than usual, and bidding more spirited. It may be said, however, that the majority of the auctions were held under Court orders, and from this fact, it being fully understood that a sale must be effected, purchasers made their bids with more freedom. The prices generally ruled fair. The following is a review of the business transacted:

ROBERTS & McGUIRE, by order of the Supreme Court in partition, under the direction of JAMES M. SWEENEY, Esq., referee, disposed of a large lot of property, as follows: Premises No. 46 Mott-street, embracing two brick houses and a yard; premises Nos. 123 and 125 Hester-street, south-west corner of Mulberry-street, brick buildings and lots, renting respectively for $1,600 and $1,200 each per year; premises No. 128 Prince-street, brick house and lot; four building lots on the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, ninth-avenue, and one lot on Sixty-third-street, near Fourth-avenue. The aggregate sum realized from the sale was $79,000. The details, with names of purchasers, &c., are given in the recapitulation below. The executor's sale of the leasehold property No. 136 Suffolk-street, advertised to be sold yesterday by Messrs. ROBERTS & CO., and adjourned from Wednesday last, was further adjourned indefinitely.

JAMES M. MILLER, by order of the Supreme Court, also in partition, under the direction of ABRAM D. DEMAREST, Esq., referee, sold the following real estate: Four lots, with the buildings thereon, on the north-east corner of Cherry and Oliver streets, the lots together forming a plot in size, 80 by 100, and six lots with the buildings thereon, on the east side of Oliver-street, comprising the block front between Cherry and Water-streets, each plot being 20 feet by about 80. The property was sold in ten parcels, the particulars in regard to which reference is made to the summary annexed. It formerly belonged to the estate of ELISA LEWIS, deceased, afterward to that of DANIEL W. GUATIER, and it was sold yesterday in the suit entitled GEORGE G. BENNETT and others, EXRS. &c., vs. VREELAND, et al. The total amount realized at the auction for the property was $63,925. Mr. MILLER also sold at public auction the four-story brick factory building and lot No. 177 Lewis-street, west side, between Fourth and Fifth streets, for $10,900. Mr. SQUIER purchased the premises.

E. H. LUDLOW & Co., by order of the executors of CHARLES M. CISCO, deceased, sold the four-story brown-stone front store and lot, No. 62 Vesey-st., for $61,200, and the three-story brick house and lot, No. 345 East Twentieth-street, for $8,100; Mr. JOHN J. CISCO purchased both pieces. Messrs. LUDLOW & CO. also offered for sale, by order of the administrator of NATHAN R. GRAVES, deceased, the premises No. 1244 Second-avenue, embracing a large four-story brick house and lot, the latter 36.8 by 125. For this property $35,000 was bid but not accepted, and it was subsequently withdrawn. The sale of house and lot on Forty-fourth-street, near Broadway, instead of taking place as announced, was again adjourned for two weeks.

E. MULLER, WILKINS & Co. at public auction, disposed of the premises No. 270 Spring-street, near Varick, comprising a lot, 26 feet front, (rear irregular,) upon which two buildings are erected, for $13,250, to SAMUEL KOFFMAN. The same firm also offered at public auction two lots of land, with front and rear brick buildings on the same, respectively known as Nos. 91 and 93 West Broadway; and, in addition, three building lots on the south side of Seventh-street, west of Second-avenue, and one lot on Sixty-third-street, Brooklyn. In neither instance was a sale effected, however, although the first named property was struck off to Jas. A. OLWELL for $23,000, and the second to E. J. SALMON for $7,700.

A. J. BLEECKER, Son & Co., at public auction, sold a plot of ground containing four lots, situate on the north-west corner of Ninth-avenue and One Hundred and Forty-first-street, to C. D. GILDERSLEEVE, for $7,800—a low figure. Upon the property is a two-story frame house and a stable. The Morrisania real estate, embracing four large lots, located on the south-west corner of Westchester and Robbins avenues, in the town named, was not sold, although bid off by THOMAS H. PETER for $6,800.

A. H. NICOLAY offered at public auction the three-story and basement high-stoop brick house and lot No. 26 East Twenty-eighth-street, south side, 125 feet east of Madison-avenue; lot 26 by 98.9, house 65 feet deep. The premises were knocked down to JOHN WRIGHT for $34,250, but reported not sold.

JOHNSON & MILLER disposed of Brooklyn property as follows: Three-story frame house and two lots of ground known as No. 16 Fourth-place, between Division and Myrtle-avenue streets, lots (together 50 feet front by 96 feet in depth, rear line 30.3 feet, sold for $11,800 to CHARLES HAYES.

No further sales were made, and an adjournment by WM. KENNELLY for two weeks of the sale of building lots on Fifth-avenue, between One Hundred and Thirty-sixth and One Hundred and Thirty-seventh streets, to the next day of sale. Today, at the Exchange, City property of a desirable character will be offered at auction by MULLER, WILKINS & Co., E. H. LUDLOW & Co., and ROBERTS & MCGUIRE. In addition, HAZARD, APTHORP & Co. will offer for sale the Club House of the New-York Yacht Club, located at Clifton, Staten Island. The average cash value of property sold at the Exchange yesterday amounted to $198,225.

Attention is called to the list of stores offered on lease by E. H. LUDLOW & Co.; No. 3 Pine-street, as advertised in our business columns yesterday; also to the desirable residence located at Stamford, Conn., offered at private sale by the same firm.

WM. H. TAYLOR, No. 5½ Pine-street, reports having sold at private sale two lots on the west side of Tenth-avenue, 25 feet north of One Hundredth-street, 50 by 66 feet, through to old Broadway, for $4,750; also, four lots on the south-east corner of the Grand Boulevard and One Hundred and Forty-eighth-street, and one on the west side of Tenth-avenue, 25 feet north of One Hundred and Thirty-sixth-street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, for $2,300 each.

PROPOSALS.

PROPOSALS FOR NEW POST-OFFICE ENVELOPES.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 12, 1871.

SEALED PROPOSALS will be received at this Department until FRIDAY, the 19th day of May, 1871, at 12 o'clock M., for furnishing in such quantities, and at such times as may be required, the following described post-office envelopes, for a period of two years, commencing on the 1st day of July, 1871, to wit:

FOR OFFICIAL LETTERS AND RETURNS.

No. 1, size 3¼ by 5¾ inches; estimated number required annually, 1,000,000.

No. 2, size 3½ by 6¼ inches; estimated number required annually, 1,250,000.

No. 3, size 4 by 9 inches; estimated number required annually, 1,000,000.

No. 4, size 4½ by 10¼ inches; estimated number required annually, 500,000.

FOR REGISTERED PACKAGES.

No. 5, size 5 by 12½ inches; estimated number required annually, 4,000,000.

The estimates given are intended as a guide to bidders. The Department may require more or less of each kind, as the service may demand.

Bids must be made for each kind of envelope separately, and the contract will be awarded, item by item, to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders.

Specimens of the different sizes and styles of envelopes required, together with blank forms for bids, will be furnished on application to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General.

The envelopes must strictly conform in size, quality of paper, gumming and make, to the samples, the gumming on the laps or lappets to be done in the best manner by hand, or otherwise. They must be packed in parcels of twenty-five, packed in strong pasteboard or straw boxes, securely bound with linen or cotton cloth on the corners and edges, each to contain not less than 100 of the smallest size, and not less than 100 of the other sizes, or otherwise, as may be ordered, the boxes to be wrapped in strong manilla paper and properly sealed, so as to bear safe transportation by mail to Postmasters. When required to be delivered at the Department the wrapping may be dispensed with, in the discretion of the Postmaster-General.

When 2,000 or more envelopes are required to fill the order of a Postmaster, or when large lots are ordered to be sent to the Post-office Department, they must be packed in strong wooden cases and properly addressed, but when less than 2,000 are required to be sent by mail, proper labels of direction must be placed on each package; all to be done by the contractor without additional charge.

The envelopes must be delivered in such quantities as may from time to time be required to fill the orders of Postmasters or of the Department, and be delivered either at the Post-office in the city where the accepted bidder resides, or at this Department, as the Postmaster-General may direct, free of cost for packing, labeling and delivering; the whole to be done under the inspection and supervision of an agent of the Department.

All the envelopes herein described must bear such printing as the Postmaster-General may direct, and the registered package envelopes will be required to be printed in vermilion or some other approved brilliant color.

The Postmaster-General reserves the right to reject any and all bids, if in his judgment the interests of the Government require it.

Each proposal must be signed by the individual or firm making it, and be accompanied by a guarantee certified to be responsible and sufficient by the Postmaster or United States Attorney where the bidder resides that the bidder shall, within ten days after being called upon to do so, execute a contract to furnish promptly, and in quantities as ordered, the articles of which he may bid to be accepted, with a bond, with approved security, in a penalty of not less than twice the contract price of all the articles estimated to be furnished by said bidder, conditioned upon the faithful performance of the same.

Proposals unaccompanied by such guarantee will not be considered.

The Postmaster-General reserves to himself the right to annul the contract if in his judgment there shall be a failure to perform satisfactorily any of its stipulations, or in case of a willful attempt to impose upon the Department envelopes inferior to samples. The failure to comply with any one order under the contract will operate as a forfeiture of the entire penalty of the bond under the seventeenth section of the act of Congress approved Aug. 26, 1842, entitled "An Act legislating and making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department," usually included in the General Appropriation bills without authority of law, and to fix and provide for certain incidental expenses of the Departments and offices of the Government, for other purposes." (U. S. Statutes at Large, vol. 5, page 256;) or the Postmaster-General may, in his discretion, direct the purchase in open market of such quantities of envelopes as shall be necessary to supply the deficiency caused by such failure, and charge to the contractor or contractors fifty per centum of the price which it shall be found necessary to pay for such articles.

Bids should be securely enveloped and sealed, marked "Proposals for Post-office Envelopes," and addressed to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, Post-office Department, Washington, D. C.
JOHN A. GRISWELL,
Postmaster-General.

SHOCKING MURDER.

The Story of an Unparalleled Crime in This City.

Dangers of the City Street-Cars—A Lady Insulted and Her Protector Stricken Down—A Cry for the Police Which Was Not Heard—A Wonderful Vitality Successfully Resists Official Negligence and Stupidity.

At 11 o'clock on Wednesday night the Twenty-second Precinct Police telegraphed to the Police Head-quarters that AVERY D. PUTNAM had been assaulted when leaving a Broadway car, at the corner of Seventh-avenue and Forty-sixth-street, and had received a fracture of the skull. No details were given, and owing to the lateness of the hour, and the remoteness of the locality, the Times, in common with all the other morning papers, was able to give only a shadowy hint of what was in fact one of the most brutal, cowardly, unprovoked and malicious murders with which the City has ever been disgraced. It is proper to state here, in order to fully understand the dreadful narrative now to be given, that the Twenty-second Precinct is under the command of Capt. THOS. KILLILEA, a Tammany protégé, who was notorious, last Summer, in connection with the Elm Park riot, and who, shortly before that time, had a murder within a block of his station-house, which was reported to Police Head-quarters as a "sudden death."

No human life was ever more wantonly assailed than that of AVERY D. PUTNAM, and no lady in any civilized community ever had a more awful experience than Mrs. DUVAL, who saw her friend and protector first insulted, then bullied and finally stricken down. The lady, who resides at No. 162 Broadway, has two daughters, the eldest of whom is a member of the choir of the Church of the Advent, No. 35 West Forty-sixth-street, and has been in the habit of attending at the church on Wednesday evenings, with the other members, for the purpose of practicing. As she went early in the evening, she generally was trusted alone, but unless it was known that she would have an escort back, Mme. DUVAL has always repaired to the church with her younger daughter, JENNIE, a miss of about fourteen years, to accompany her home.

Wednesday evening last, Mme. DUVAL and Miss JENNIE were about to leave home upon this errand, when Mr. AVERY D. PUTNAM, a provision merchant at No. 68 Pearl-street, who has been an intimate friend of the family for the past five years, called at the house, as he has been in the habit of doing. Learning the purpose of his friends, he offered to accompany them, and at precisely 9 o'clock the party took a Broadway car at Eighth-street and University-place. Nothing occurred until the car was approaching the Gilsey House, when Mr. PUTNAM asked Miss JENNIE if she had seen the clock in one of the towers of that edifice, and playfully remarked that it was so high as to require glasses to see it in cloudy weather. The curiosity of the girl being thus excited, she turned her head to see this novelty, but finding that a view could not be obtained from the window, went to the front door of the car and peered up. The driver, who is named PATRICK CUNNINGHAM, turned half around as she did so, and looking down at her laughed insultingly, and at the same time nudged a ruffianly and half-drunken man who stood beside him, and who has since proved to be WM. FOSTER, an ex-conductor of the Broadway line. Miss JENNIE finding she had attracted the attention of these coarse men lost all desire to see the singular clock, and dropped back into her seat beside her mother, who had also observed the actions of the men, and who closed the door of the car at the instant her daughter sat down. It was immediately opened again by the man FOSTER, who thrust in his head with an insulting look at mother and daughter, but Mme. DUVAL, saying nothing, again shut the door, which was, however, instantly opened again, and the insult repeated.

It was not until this instant that these actions attracted the attention of Mr. PUTNAM, who was seated on the opposite side of the car, and who then got up and went to the front door, FOSTER stepping back as he did so, so that Mr. PUTNAM stood in the door, in which position a word or two passed between him and the man on the platform, which were not distinctly heard inside. Mr. PUTNAM immediately stepped back and, as he did so, FOSTER followed, growling that he had paid his five cents and would have the door open if he liked. Mr. PUTNAM answered that the lady was ill and could not have the door open, and then added, when FOSTER said that he had a right to a seat that he must not annoy the ladies, as they were with him. Mr. PUTNAM then sat down again, and FOSTER flung himself down into a seat beside Miss JENNIE, whom her mother immediately removed to the other side, whereupon the brute said: "What is it your business?" to which Mme. DUVAL replied: "She is my daughter, sir." Mr. PUTNAM then remarked that if he had noticed that the man was in liquor he would have said nothing to him, and folding his arms across his breast, closely watched the brute who sat opposite, with one foot on the seat scowling brutally at him. This brute, addressing himself to Mr. PUTNAM, then said, "How far are you going?" but receiving no reply, repeated the question twice with the same result, and then, in the tone of a savage infuriated beyond control, exclaimed, "Well, I'm going as far as you do, and I'll give you hell when you get off."

All this had occupied less time than the telling of it, and the unpleasant episode had been almost forgotten by Mme. DUVAL, when the car was approaching that point, asked the conductor, who was passing through, to stop at Forty-sixth-street. FOSTER had meantime gone out again upon the front platform, and, it is presumed, overheard this direction. The conductor stopped at the next Forty-sixth-street, and the driver rang to the rear platform. Miss JENNIE being in advance, stepped first to the street and then passed on toward the sidewalk. Mr. PUTNAM was next, and was standing in the street extending his hand to Mme. DUVAL, who had one foot on the step, when FOSTER, who had run down on the outside of the car from the front platform, dealt Mr. PUTNAM a blow on the head with the car-hook, which felled him to the ground insensible. FOSTER ran back, flung the hook upon the front platform, and disappeared in the darkness. FREDERICK E. GOLDWATER, the conductor, who had witnessed this outrage at his side, rang the bell, the car started on, and Mme. DUVAL was left in the middle of the street with her child and her apparently lifeless friend.

Subsequent events appear almost incredible. Several persons were attracted immediately to the spot, and to them Mme. DUVAL appealed for help. They, charitably supposing the prostrate man to be drunk, did not render any assistance. Mme. DUVAL cried for the Police so loudly and wildly that her daughter, who was in the church almost a block away, heard it, and was alarmed by it, but no Police came. Mr. PUTNAM lay upon the down railroad track, and a car being rapidly approaching, Mme. DUVAL and her little daughter, with a score of real wrath men looking on, succeeded in partly dragging, partly carrying the wounded man to the sidewalk. The wound on the head and flowing blood being then discernable, some of the gapers answered the appeal for help by picking up Mr. PUTNAM and carrying him to a neighboring drug-store. Mme. DUVAL begged in vain in this place for succor for her friend, and finally asking for a carriage to take him to his home, was informed by a person present, who was understood to be a physician, that she would kill him if she did. This person had not offered to aid the sufferer in any way, but proceeded to dilate very learnedly upon the peculiarities and effects of the fracture of the skull, which he said had been received. Mme. DUVAL, who unfortunately does not know the name of this individual, so that it can be given to public execration, then asked what she should do, and received a vast amount of conflicting counsel, but when she asked that the store, which was crowded to suffocation, might be cleared, so that the wounded man might have air, no one offered to enforce her sensible suggestion.

Fully ten minutes had now elapsed since he was carried into the store, and Mr. PUTNAM had partially regained consciousness, when some of the Twenty-second Precinct Police sauntered in and wanted to know "what's the row." Finding a severely-wounded man, they proceeded to discuss among themselves what should be done with him, but had not arrived at any conclusion when a superior officer happened in, and decided the matter by ordering him to be taken to the Station-house. A stretcher was procured, and Mr. PUTNAM, being laid thereon, complained that it hurt his head, whereupon Mme. DUVAL endeavored in vain to borrow or buy a pillow; and after a lapse of more than half an hour the now almost dying man was carried into the Station-house, which was little more than a quarter of a mile from the spot where he had been stricken down. Mme. DUVAL, who is unused to the singular method adopted in such cases, was appalled to find a human life further hazarded by a long waiting for a Police Surgeon, during which the victim lay without comforts, conveniences or attentions, and she was meantime entertained by remarks from those about as to the drunkenness of the helpless man, who then being conscious, and not having drank a drop of intoxicating liquors for years, was not benefited by finding what was supposed to be the cause of his condition. At last Dr. RABORG arrived, did what he could for the sufferer, which was very little, as the Station-houses into which cases of injury and sudden sickness are carried every day, have no accommodation whatever for them. Dr. RABORG did the best possible for the victim of lawlessness, and red tape by getting him as speedily as possible into the nearest proper receptacle, and he was conveyed to St. Luke's Hospital, where he yet remains.

A citizen had taken the precaution to get the number of the car, and this being furnished the Police, CUNNINGHAM was arrested, and he giving the names and whereabouts of the principals in the tragedy, FOSTER was arrested at 8 o'clock in the morning by Officer DAVIS, in East Twenty-fourth-street, and was locked up in the Forty-seventh-street Police Station. Yesterday both prisoners were arraigned before Alderman PLUNKITT, at the Yorkville Police Court, and were remanded to the Station-house to await the result. At a late hour of the afternoon the condition of the sufferer was considered so critical that the Coroner was notified to take his ante-mortem statement, and the case thus passes into the jurisdiction of the latter official.

Mr. PUTNAM, of whose recovery there is little or no hope, is about forty years of age, is a merchant in comfortable circumstances and of high standing. He has a wife and one son, aged eleven years, with whom he resided at No. 11 Cottage-place. He was always remarkable for his strictly temperate habits and his quiet, gentlemanly deportment.

THE CENTRAL PARK CAPTIVES.

American Museum of Natural History—Reception Yesterday—A Highly Interesting Collection.

Notwithstanding the severe storm that prevailed yesterday afternoon, a large number of persons were present at the old Arsenal Building in Central Park, on the invitation of the Trustees of the American Museum of Natural History, to attend a complimentary reception, and to examine the scientific collection gathered there.

The American Museum of Natural History was incorporated by the Legislature April 4, 1869, for the purpose of establishing and maintaining in the Museum said Library of Natural History, for the advancement of knowledge on kindred subjects, and to furnish popular instruction and recreation.

Some months after the act of incorporation the trustees purchased the extensive collection of mammals, birds, fishes, &c., belonging to the late Prince MAXIMILIAN, of Neuwied, Germany, the fine collection of birds, and also a portion of the Versaux and other collections of specimens of natural history.

Having, by these purchases, an already extensive museum in their possession, the trustees applied to the Commissioners of Central Park for permission to place them on exhibition in the Arsenal Building, reserving to themselves certain rights. The permission was immediately accorded, and has since been confirmed by the present Board, which has placed at their disposal the second and third floors of the building, for the exhibition, and a part of the first and fourth floors for workrooms and offices.

Since the building passed into the possession of the trustees, it has been entirely renovated. The iron columns which formerly quartered on the first floor, have been removed. A part of this floor is now occupied by handsomely-furnished offices, and the rest of it is at present vacant.

The second floor is furnished with handsome and commodious glass cases, and here the museum begins. The cases in the centre of the floor contain specimens of coral insects and other polyps and shells from various parts of the world. Most of these specimens form part of the Maximilian collection. Around the walls are arranged other cases, which contain every variety of South American birds. Here are to be seen all kinds of parrots, of every size and color; also macaws, beautiful specimens of the golden pheasant, birds of Paradise, birds of Java, whose gorgeous plumage will almost dazzle the eye, and a rare collection of goldfinches, all of which are beautifully mounted, and look as natural as possible. There is also the hoopoee, from Europe, and the Pompadora, so named from the brilliancy of its plumage. This floor also contains a collection of sea animals from Brazil, and a complete collection of woods and minerals from the Island of Formosa. Gen. LEGENDRE, Consul at Amoy, collected the specimens and presented them to the Museum.

The third floor contains the collection of North American birds; also numerous varieties of birds from Europe, Asia and Africa. There is also upon this floor an extensive collection of mammals, from kangaroos to monkeys. One case contains a large and majestic African lion, about which are grouped several tigers and leopards. The other cases contain over 400 mounted specimens of mammals, birds, reptiles, and fishes from the Versaux collection. One of the most interesting objects on this floor is a group representing an Arab on a camel, attacked by a lion and lioness. The lioness, which the Arab has killed, lies dead beneath the camel's feet, and the lion, to revenge the death of his mate, has sprung upon the camel's back and endeavors to grasp the Arab by the arm, which is raised above his head preparatory to striking his assailant with a long, keen knife. The group is life-like and real, and may be the means of deterring many from risking the passage of the Great Desert. The entire collection at present contains nearly 4,000 different specimens, and it will be added to as the accommodations are increased.

Reorganization of the New-York Infant Asylum.

A meeting was held last evening at Association Hall for the purpose of aiding in the reorganization of the New-York Infant Asylum and Foundling Society, which was chartered by the Legislature some few years ago. Among the gentlemen present were Rev. Dr. BELLOWS, Rev. JOSEPH P. THOMPSON, Rev. Dr. MONTGOMERY, Rev. Dr. DEEMS, Ex-Attorney-General SANDFORD and others. The meeting was called to order by Mr. SANDFORD, and Rev. Dr. MONTGOMERY was chosen President. After prayer by Rev. Dr. DEEMS, Rev. Dr. MONTGOMERY made a few remarks introducing resolutions indorsing the objects of the society and urging upon the trustees of moneys of the institution the duty of immediately organizing and conducting the charity in such a manner that it shall not only lessen and prevent much of the mortality now occurring in deserted infants, but also shall compass, as far as possible, the salvation of the mothers and thus render the asylum an example and a model to the institutions of the country. These resolutions were adopted. Rev. Dr. JOSEPH P. THOMPSON, Dr. BELLOWS, and Rev. Mr. ARMITAGH made addresses and the meeting adjourned.

High-Handed Outrage in Fifty-Second-Street—A Vigilance Committee Needed.

On Wednesday night, about 11½ o'clock, MICHAEL MCKENNA, alias McGuire, one of the worst of the west side rowdies, together with three others, who are unknown, broke in the door of Mrs. SARAH M. BOGART'S residence, No. 123 West Fifty-second-street, and demanded that supper be prepared for them. Mrs. BOGART, who is a widow, aged thirty-eight years, was sitting in the kitchen with two girls named EMMA GILBERT and LOUISA BRANDON, who were staying all night with her. Seeing that supper would not be got for them, the ruffians then demanded that Mrs. BOGART would go out and get them drink. This she refused to do, and told them to leave. They then commenced to demolish the furniture, and finally outraged Mrs. BOGART. The party left about 12½ o'clock, after having destroyed all the furniture in the house. Yesterday morning Capt. KILLALEA, of the Twenty-second Precinct, arrested MCKENNA and brought him to the Yorkville Police Court, where Alderman PLUNKITT committed him in default of bail. While making her affidavit Mrs. BOGART fainted, and had to be carried out to the air. Complaints were also made against MCKENNA by the girls GILBERT and BRANDON for assault and battery.

The Williamsburg Murder—How John Goss Was Clubbed to Death.

Coroner WHITEHILL, last evening, commenced an inquest in Justice VOORHIES' Court-room, Williamsburg, in the case of JOHN GOSS, who was most foully murdered on Tuesday morning last by an unknown person, who came stealthily behind him in a public thoroughfare, and fractured his skull in a shocking manner by a blow with a cart-rung. The Court-room was densely crowded during the inquest. JOHN CONBOY, the fireman who was arrested on suspicion, was present, surrounded by a host of male and female relatives. The only witnesses examined were CHAMPLIN H. SMITH, the companion of Goss when he received his fatal blow, and THOMAS H. MEARNS, the young man who was present in the saloon during the quarrel between Goss and CONBOY previous to the murder of the former. Their testimony was only in relation to the fight in ACKERLY'S saloon between the deceased and the prisoner, and did not differ from the account previously published. SMITH testified that he was under the influence of liquor at the time, and that Goss was in a worse condition than he was. He recollects that a man struck Goss on the back of the head with a club, but could not give any description of him. He said he was so frightened at the time that he ran five blocks without stopping, losing his hat on the way.

There is no evidence of a positive character against CONBOY, although the circumstantial evidence appears to point to him as the murderer.

The inquest will be resumed this morning, in the Coroner's office, County Court-house.

POLITICAL.

Second Assembly District Republicans—Condemnation of Winans' Treachery.

A regular meeting of the members of the Union Republican Association of the Second Assembly District was held last evening, at No. 375 Pearl-street, Mr. MARK LAMAGAN in the chair. A set of resolutions were adopted condemning the treachery of ORANGE S. WINANS, and declining the recommendation that he be elected their Representative, as the Sixth Ward was in their district, averring that they had been always true to their Republican obligations, and never tolerated treason in their midst. The meeting adjourned after the election of fifteen new members.

Fifteenth Assembly District Grant Club.

The second meeting of the Fifteenth Assembly District Grant Club was held at the hall on the corner of Thirty-fourth-street and Eighth-avenue, last evening, Mr. C. W. COWTON in the chair, and Mr. C. W. HOPPER acting as Secretary. Mr. F. H. REED, one of the delegates from this Club to the Central Grant Club reported to the meeting, that he, with other delegates, had presented himself to the Grant Central Club, at their last meeting, and that the fifteenth delegation had been refused a recognition. He said that the reason assigned for the refusal was the fact of the presence of a delegation from another Grant Club, hailing from the Fifteenth Assembly District, and that he had asked from the Central body that the rival claims of the two clubs be referred back to the Republicans of the district. This proposition was not acceded to, but there would be a reorganization of the Republican Party in this City by the 20th of May, and the fact would then be established, which was to be the bona fide Grant Club of the district. He was opposed to any Republican who affiliated politically with the Tammany Democracy, and he claimed that this Club represented the Administration wing of the party, though its members were opposed to the existence of the organization, which is a branch of the Republican Association of which Mr. LAFAUGH is the President. He felt certain of the nomination and election of Gen. GRANT to the Presidency.

Mr. AUGUSTUS BISHOP, a colored man, followed in a few remarks, saying, that as the representative man of his race in the district, he would guarantee 200 members to the Club, who would attend at the next meeting. He said that the colored men of the district were tired of being identified with the Tammany Democrats, and that they were determined hereafter to be recognized only as belonging to the Administration wing of the party. The colored men had received too many injuries from the Democratic Party to give anything like the appearance of support to that party. He believed that if he would run for the nominee of the party and that he would be elected. Col. HOPPER then made a few remarks, and the meeting adjourned.

Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance—Quarterly Session.

The Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance met Wednesday, April 26, at the Town Hall, Glen Cove, at 11 A. M. There was a very large attendance of delegates, and all the Grand Officers were present. A. W. Gleason, G. W. P.; Miss G. A. Spence, G. W. A.; E. H. Hopkins, G. S.; A. P. Higgins, G. T.; J. J. McCredie, G. C.; W. Ward, Grand Conductor; G. T. Trempee, Grand Sentinel; Stephen Merritt, Jr., P. G. W. P. The session was one of the most interesting that has ever marked the history of the order. Great harmony and good feeling characterized the deliberations. The hall was hung with American flags and temperance banners, and the halls were laden with choice flowers. The report of each Grand Worthy Patriot exhibited a flattering state of affairs in the Division within his jurisdiction; and the reports of the Grand Scribe and Treasurer revealed that there were over 23,000 members of the Order in the Eastern District of the State of New-York. Of that number 7,000 were lady members. There are 8,000 ladies' visitors, 4,000 boys and girls in the order organizations. Over $23,000 had been paid into subordinate divisions during the quarter. There are 367 divisions in full working operation; eight divisions have been instituted during the quarter, and four divisions have surrendered their charters. During the morning session the time was mainly occupied in the reading of reports and the appointments of committees, and the initiation of newly-elected delegates. In the afternoon session the reports of the various committees were read and adopted.

The reports all gave assurance of the excellent condition of the affairs of the Order. At 5 o'clock the session adjourned with cheering and great unanimity of feeling. In the evening probably the largest temperance gathering ever held in Glen Cove, assembled in the Town Hall. Speeches followed in quick succession, and all were received with demonstrations of applause. T. W. Parsons, of Somerset, Miss A. A. Spence, G. W. A. Gleason, G. Gedney, Rev. Anson Gleason, Capt. John Thompson, Rev. Stephen Hewitt, Jr., S. T. Warfield and Geo. W. Bungay eloquently and earnestly advocated the cause of total abstinence. At 9 o'clock many members of the Grand Division left the hall to take the steamer for New-York, that had been chartered by the Grand Division, but the meeting still continued and did not adjourn until a late hour of the evening.

The Wooden Pavement Swindle—Meeting of Lexington-Avenue Property-Owners To-Night.

A meeting of the owners of property on Lexington-avenue, between Twenty-first and Thirty-fourth streets, and Twenty-fifth-street, between Third and Madison avenues, who have been assessed for the McGonical wooden pavement there laid down, will be held this evening at 7½ o'clock in the Veterinary College, No. 208 Lexington-avenue. A few days ago a preliminary meeting was held, at which Mr. JOHN P. CROKER was elected Chairman of a committee of three to investigate the grievances and determine upon some remedy. These gentlemen represent almost the entire respectable portion of the property-owners assessed on the streets mentioned. They say that the assessment for Lexington-avenue alone is $87,000. In one instance it has been made $30 for fifteen feet, where it actually cost but $100. The remonstrants say that they would not even object to this were they not confident that the surplus went to enrich a pack of political plunderers instead of being applied to legitimate purposes. Eminent counsel have been engaged, and will contest the matter in the civil Courts. There is a law which binds the City to issue the warrant of eighteen per cent for street improvements, and afterward any change made will have to be undertaken at the expense of the Corporation. The meeting is expected to be a large one.

The Knickerbocker Life Insurance Company.

The policy-holders of the Knickerbocker Insurance Company have been making serious complaints lately as to the management of the Company, and allege that they have been made the victims of fraud and misrepresentations on the part of the agents. It is alleged that persons have been induced to take policies on the representation that the Company would pay an annual dividend of from thirty-five to fifty per cent., when no such agreement was sanctioned by the Company. A meeting of the policy-holders will be held next week to give suitable expression to their views.

The Ku-Klux Horror in South Carolina—Directions of Gov. Scott to the County Sheriff.

By direction of Gov. SCOTT the following letter regarding the recent shooting of Mr. MELTON, wife and daughter, in Chesterfield County, S. C., was sent to the Sheriff of that county, on Saturday last:

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, COLUMBIA, S. C., April 22.

P. F. Stafford, Sheriff of Chesterfield County:

Information has reached this department, from reliable sources, that your county is infested by a gang of lawless men, who are committing wanton and unprovoked outrages on peaceful citizens and their property, in contempt and violation of law, and apparently to the disregard or indifference of the peace officers of the county, of whose efforts, if any, to arrest them this office has not been apprised.

I am directed, therefore, by His Excellency, the Governor, to notify you, as the chief executive officer of the County of Chesterfield, of this deplorable condition of things, and to inform you that if it is not promptly rectified he will feel it to be his imperative duty, in accordance with law, to organize a sufficient military force constituting a force for the county of Chesterfield as will suffice for the efficient defense and protection of the lives and property of citizens, and the maintenance and enforcement of the law.

The Governor would fain avoid this course, not only on account of the expense it would incur, but of the confession of weakness implied in the constituted authorities to perform their legitimate duties, but if these are derelict he must and will take the responsibility. Very respectfully,

JOHN KLEARY, Private Secretary.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

Yesterday afternoon the graduating class of Grammar School No. 35 gave an entertainment in their chapel. The exercises consisted of essays and recitations, together with music, both instrumental and vocal, very creditably rendered. At the close of the exercises Mr. P. S. VANDERIDEL, on behalf of the graduates of 1871, presented to the Trustees two statuettes, the "Council of War" and "The Fugitives," both by ROGERS, and a splendid chromo, as a token of regard and esteem and a memento of the many happy hours spent in School No. 35. The present was suitably acknowledged by the Chairman. Short addresses were afterward delivered by Drs. BELLOWS and HUNTER. Among those present were Messrs. L. W. FOWLER, CHAS. D. BROWN, Rev. Drs. SUTPHEN, BURCHARD and CRAWFORD.

An inquest was yesterday held by Coroner YOUNG in the case of HARRY BENNERSON, the Englishman who was found dead at his boarding-house, No. 320 West Nineteenth-street. When found, the stuffened head held to his nostrils a cloth that had been saturated with chloroform, and a bottle of the drug was picked up by his side. He had for some time been in the habit of using chloroform to produce intoxication, and was often insensible for two or three days at a time. There was but little doubt that he died from an overdose of the drug, and a verdict was rendered accordingly.

On the old anniversary-day of the American Anti-Slavery Society, Tuesday, May 9, a Reform League meeting is to be held at Steinway Hall, in this City. Addresses will be delivered by Wendell Phillips, Lucretia Mott, Julia Ward Howe, Rev. John T. Sargent, Robert Purvis, Hon. Robert De Large, of South Carolina, Rev. J. Sella Martin, of Alabama, and probably also Frederick Douglass, Hon. George W. Julian, Rev. Samuel J. May, and others. It is to be a reform meeting, free from any and all party limitations of politics, or of sectarianism.

In the case of BARNUM against CORNWELL, reported in the Times a few days since, Judge LOEW, of the Court of Common Pleas, decides that a marble slab floor laid down so as to be capable of removal without injury to the building, is a movable fixture, and may be carried away by the tenant or those taking title from him.

The anniversary reception of the House of Industry will be held in Calvary Chapel of their institution, at 8 o'clock P. M. to-day. It is expected that Rev. Dr. THEODORE L. CUYLER, of Brooklyn, and Rev. Dr. H. C. POTTER, Rector of Grace Church of this City, will deliver addresses. The children will sing.

In our advertising columns may be found the announcements that Messrs. J. B. LIPPINCOTT & Co., of Philadelphia, have just opened a New-York agency at No. 25 Bond-street. All of their publications may be procured at that place after to-day.

Yesterday was the closing-out day of the Metropolitan Hotel sale. The attendance was large, considering the rain, and lots went off at fair prices. The articles sold were not generally of much value.

Recorder HACKETT being still ill, the Court of General Sessions was merely opened as a matter of formality by Judge BEDFORD, yesterday morning, and was then adjourned until today.

Last evening a fire occurred in the desk manufactory of of KEHO, KELLNER & Co., No. 109 Suffolk-street, doing a damage to stock of $1,000, and of $200 to the building.

Mr. A. H. UNDERHILL'S daughter, 15 appears, was appointed a school teacher before her father was elected a school trustee, and he had no voice in the matter.

BROOKLYN.

CHARLES LEWIS, DANIEL DUNN, CHARLES MERRET, GEORGE BROWN and EMMA SMITH, all charged with keeping a panel-house at No. 61 Hicks-street, were tried, yesterday morning, before Justice WALSH, and being found guilty were required to give bonds in $600 each to keep the peace for one year.

All the testimony in the Regan will case, now being tried in the Supreme Court, was put in yesterday afternoon. The opposing counselors will sum up to-day.

LONG ISLAND.

A Mr. SHAFFER, residing in Jackson-avenue, Long Island City, who had been sick with small-pox for the past few weeks, became delirious on Tuesday evening, but being poor, his wife could not afford proper attendance, and undertook to take charge of him herself. Early yesterday morning, having become much worse, he jumped from the bed, knocked his wife down, and leaving her in a senseless condition, rushed from the house half undressed. The condition of his face, all covered with sores, was sufficient to warn those in the streets, and they all avoided him. This seemed to madden him, and he rushed into a number of saloons, stores and houses, the occupants fleeing as he entered. At length SHAFFER was secured.

An Independent Democratic Convention in the Second Ward of Long Island City, last evening nominated A. BROGRAW, the retiring Alderman at large of that ward, for re-election.

At a convention of the Republicans of the First Ward, Long Island City, held last night, WM. BRIDGE was nominated for Alderman of that ward.

NEW-JERSEY.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders of Hudson County held a meeting yesterday afternoon. With reference to the legality of the recent election for Freeholders, the Legislative Committee stated that they had obtained the opinions of three lawyers on the matter, but in the absence of one from the State—Attorney-General GILCHRIST, the Board adjourned until Monday, when they expect to have an official decision from that officer.

By the lease of the united railroads of New-Jersey to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, the latter agrees to take the property and franchises of the united companies and to assume all their obligations, paying ten per cent. per annum upon the capital and stock of the companies. The united companies comprise the New-Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company, the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company, the Philadelphia and Trenton Railroad Company, and the Delaware and Raritan Canal Company. The leased lines which will also pass under the control of the Pennsylvania Company extend over nearly every county in the southern half of the State.

JOHN WHITE, the Hoboken Justice, who was imprisoned in the Hudson County Jail for three months, has received his commission as Justice of the Peace. WHITE resigned his office before sentence was passed upon him for embezzlement by Judge BEDLE, and he has now been elected to the same office again. WHITE has always been popular with the people of Hoboken, although the "irregularities" which led to his imprisonment had a tendency to shake his oldest friendships.

Prof. BARKER, of Yale College, last evening delivered the fifth of the series of scientific lectures before the Stevens Institute of Technology, it being the first at two lectures on the "Spectroscope." Despite the heavy rain the hall was crowded. The lecture was upon the construction and use of the spectroscope and its adaptation to the uses of practical science, particularly in chemistry and in the Bessemer process.

The First Presbyterian Church of Woodside was dedicated last evening. Rev. CHARLES S. ROBINSON, of New-York, preached the sermon, and Rev. Drs. CRAVENS and SMITH, of Newark, assisted in the services. A large audience was present.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA is the Great Blood-purifier; thoroughly cleanses and renovates the entire system and readily enters into the circulation of the blood, after purging with HELMBOLD'S GRAPE PILLS the foul humors that have accumulated in the system for years. Both are carefully prepared according to the rules of pharmacy and chemistry, and are thoroughly reliable. A test of twenty years has proved this. Try them.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAT.—The moving season of the year has come, and the transit from the old to the new domicile is always accompanied with disaster. Mirrors are smashed, furniture scratched, garments torn and soiled, and the new hat laid aside for special occasion—well, that is a condition always to render a visit to KNOX'S, No. 212 Broadway, absolutely necessary. It is fortunate for hat-wearers that we have a Knox.
